Truck strike is over

Some holdouts

By DONALD E. MULLEN
United Press International

Independent truckers leader Mike Parkhurst Thursday called off an 11-day nationwide strike.

Industry rivals immediately sent word to big rig drivers to "stay on strike."

"We are officially asking independent truckers and small-fleet owners who have joined the shutdown to get back to work as soon as possible," said Parkhurst, president of the Independent Truckers Association.

Paul Dietsch, a representative of the Fraternal Association of Steel Haulers, responded: "We're advising everyone to stay on strike."

Rumors of an end to the violent strike had been circulating for the past two days, as more and more truck drivers returned to the highways.

Parkhurst lobbied Congress for special hearings to consider legislative reforms to the 1982 Highway Revenue Act, which the truckers said imposed inequitable fuel taxes and highway user fees on the industry.

The bill, passed by the lame-duck session of Congress, hiked federal fuel taxes by 5 cents a gallon and imposed a sharply higher user fees on trucks to bankroll a major highway repair and rebuilding program.

Parkhurst called for an end to the strike after four congressmen — Reps. Peter Kostmayer, D-Pa., Ed Jenkins, D-Ga., Douglas Applegate, D-Ohio, and Carroll Campbell Jr., R-S.C. — in a letter urged their colleagues to consider the truckers' complaints.

The letter did not say Congress

Begin cabinet fires Sharon

Grenade attack kills protester

By MEL LAYTNER
United Press International

JERUSALEM — Israel's Cabinet Thursday adopted the recommendations of the judicial inquiry into the Beirut massacre, paving the way for the ouster of Defense Minister Ariel Sharon.

The 16-1 vote followed a grenade explosion in a crowd of Peace Now protesters outside the Cabinet meeting, killing a paratrooper who friends said fought in the Lebanon invasion and injuring nine others who demanded Sharon be fired.

Earlier, death threats were reported against members of the three-member panel that probed for four months Israeli actions in the massacre.

Sharon cast the sole vote against the report of the state commission, which recommended his dismissal, the removal of two army generals and censured civilian and military leaders overall, saying in some way they bore "indirect" responsibility for the killings.

"One way or another he is out," a senior aide to Prime Minister Menachem Begin said of Sharon, who adamantly rejected calls for the last three days that he resign or be fired.

"Legally, he is still defense minister," the official said. "In actuality, he is not."

Begin's spokesman Uri Porath said "the legal questions surrounding Sharon's removal will be ironed out in the next couple of days one way or another."

The commission specifically said Sharon bore "personal responsibility" for the killings because he ordered Israeli-backed Christian militiamen into the Palestinian refugee camps of Sabra and Chatila camps last Sept. 16-18.

The report also charged two generals were derelict in duty and recommended the resignation of Maj. Gen. Yeshoshua Saguy, military intelligence chief, and the removal from field command for three years of Brig. Gen. Amos Yaron, the former commander of the Beirut area.

ARIEL SHARON
On the way out

Both men unsuccessfully pleaded for their careers before the vote was taken by the cabinet, meeting in a third consecutive special session on the massacre report.

Sharon bluntly said he would not discuss his future, and Begin did not personally mention Sharon after the meeting.

A senior Israeli official said earlier Begin did not want to fire Sharon. This would leave Begin the options of resigning himself, possibly forming a new cabinet without Sharon or placing him in a lesser ministry, or calling new elections.

The blast went off in the midst of the anti-Sharon protesters who were carrying flaming torches and banners 60 feet from the gates of Begin's office where the Cabinet was meeting.

It was not known who hurled the grenade into the street, where pro-

May face veto

Budget package survives tight Senate vote

By STEVEN CHRISTENSEN
United Press International

BOISE — The Idaho Senate narrowly approved a bill Thursday to balance the 1983 budget. The measure faces a possible veto by Gov. John Evans.

Senators voted 19-16 in favor of the plan to temporarily hike sales taxes by a penny, divert some dedicated funds, cut allocations to most agencies by another 1.5 percent and slash $7.7 million from the public education budget to make up an anticipated $69.2 million revenue shortfall in the current fiscal year.

The bill, which was hammered out by a GOP-controlled special committee and passed the House Wednesday by a 38-32 margin, still required some housekeeping work before it could be sent downstairs to the Democratic chief executive.

Gubernatorial aides said Evans expected to receive the measure between late Friday and early Tuesday. He then has five legislative days to veto the bill, or it would become law with or without his approval.

Evans, who was in Washington state Thursday, told a Spokane news conference he "would probably sign it, but I'm considering some line-item vetoes." The governor had previously indicated he would not approve education cuts or spending reductions for such agencies as the Department of Law Enforcement.

Debate on the budget-balancing proposal drew sharp contrasts between Republicans and Democrats. But all the senators who spoke Thursday agreed they wished there was another way to solve the revenue shortfall instead of hiking the sales tax and cutting program spending.

"It is not a bill I want, it is not a bill I like, nor is there much in it that I am enthusiastic about," said Senate President Pro Tem James Risch, a Boise Republican who led floor debate in favor of the measure.

"Every one of us can find something we object to — and in many cases object to strenuously. It's an easy bill to vote 'no' on," he told the upper chamber. But Risch said failure to work out a solution to the budget problem would result in a "shutdown" of state government, "lock, stock and barrel."

Sen. Roger Fairchild, R-Fruitland, said lawmakers who vote against the plan are "just trying to be heroes," and are not facing the grim reality of the revenue crisis.

But Democrats said school cuts would further impair the state's ability to provide a quality education for its children. They also said the bill unfairly places a sales-tax hike on low and middle-income Idahoans while corporations escape without any fiscal impact.

"We've heard a lot of talk about 'fair,'" said Sen. Vern Lannen, D-Pinehurst. "What's fair about a tax that's going to put a $12 million burden on those least able to pay?"

Under the plan, sales taxes would be hiked one-cent to four-cents on every dollar starting March 1, $12.1 million of that revenue would go directly into the general account.

The remainder would be used to pay off $31.9 million in tax anticipation notes the state expects to have to issue to balance the budget

WPPSS debt plan hatched

SEATTLE (UPI) — Calling the impending default of the Washington Public Power Supply System the "gravest crisis" in municipal borrowing since the New York City crisis of 1975, a brokerage house has devised a plan to restructure a $7 billion debt on two abandoned nuclear-power plants.

The proposal — by Thomson McKinnon Securities of New York — marks the first time a major concern on Wall Street has supported restructuring the debt.

The debt is owed by 88 Northwest public utilities and municipalities — including several in the Magic Valley area — for WPPSS plants 4 and 5, which were terminated last year after construction financing collapsed.

Howard Sitzer, Thomson McKinnon's vice president for municipal bond research, has prepared a report that suggests new bonds could be sold to pay off the holders of the present bonds, totalling $2.25 billion, which would cost the 88 participants $7 billion over the next 30 years.

The new bonds, which the report suggests should be guaranteed by the federal government, would give the 88 participants in Washington, Oregon and Idaho a grace period of six years before they would begin paying off the new debt.

"What you are enabling the utilities to do is grow into paying full debt service by 1989," Sitzer said Wednesday.

The first payments on the original bonds were due last month, but nearly every participating utility refused to pay, charging WPPSS with mismanagement and the federal Bonneville Power Administration with coercing them into signing up for the plants in 1976, by predicting a power shortage in the Northwest.

The shortage never materialized. In fact, the Northwest is experiencing a huge power surplus, and Bonneville is having trouble selling its excess power to California. WPPSS already has delayed further construction on a third plant and is considering doing so on a fourth.

The recalcitrant utilities are being sued by Chemical Bank of New York, a major trustee for WPPSS bondholders.

Because of the participants' refusal to pay their shares of the debt unless ordered to by the courts, WPPSS faces bankruptcy as early as March and almost certainly by a June bond-payment deadline, since complex litigation will delay a court resolution until later this year.

The McKinnon report says a WPPSS default would not only seriously impair the ability of state and local governments in the Northwest from borrowing money, but would have a rippling affect across the country.

"The inconvenience and injury caused by a WPPSS 4 and 5 default could cause many individuals to withdraw from the tax-exempt market entirely," the report says, adding that the loss of investor confidence "could jeopardize a portion of the badly needed repairs to the nation's infrastructure, its public facilities and roads, which must be made in the years immediately ahead."

"The stability of the municipal bond market and future viability of public power joint-agency financing represent public purposes of an overriding national concern," the report says.

State public utility commissioners welcomed the new proposal.

New jobless claims increase, unemployment may follow

By DREW VON BERGEN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The Labor Department reported Thursday the largest increase since mid-November in new claims for state unemployment benefits.

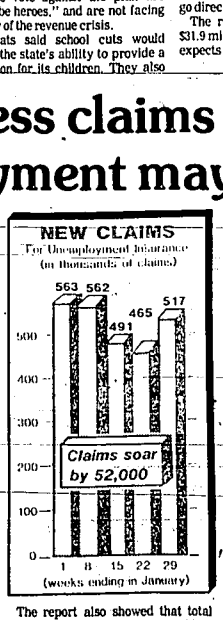
The news was underscored by signs the number of long-term unemployed people is growing.

Business and labor economists viewed the report as an indication the nation's unemployment problems may not have peaked, despite the drop in the January jobless rate from 10.8 to 10.4 percent.

A House Appropriations subcommittee approved legislation Wednesday that would help states make unemployment payments by adding $5 billion to the $6.8 billion trust fund that lends money to states for that purpose.

Initial claims for jobless checks, considered by economists an indicator of job market health, soared by 52,000 to 517,000 in the week ended Jan. 29, the department said.

It was the largest increase since an increase of 54,000 for the week ended Nov. 20, 1982.



The report also showed that total recipients of regular state jobless benefits decreased by 107,000 to 3.8 million in the week ended Jan. 22 — the lowest number in 10 months. But there were indications that many workers have exhausted regular benefits.

The seasonally adjusted total does not include those receiving 13 weeks of extended benefits nor those getting supplemental compensation after 39 weeks under a special government program passed by Congress last year.

The report Thursday said during the week ended Jan. 22 more than 1.1 million workers received the supplemental checks after regular and extended benefits were exhausted, a huge increase of 298,100 from the previous week.

Several economists have warned that the January unemployment drop from December's post-Depression high of 10.8 percent may have been exaggerated by the process of adjusting data for seasonal factors.

"We're far from out of the woods," said AFL-CIO economist Rudy Oswald. "You have more and more people out of work for a longer and longer period of time."

Jerry Jasinowski, chief economist for the National Association of Manufacturers, had a similar view.

TV more important than life

BRENTWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Genaro Garcia, 13, decided life without television wasn't worth living, so he shot himself with his father's revolver.

The boy got a .38 caliber pistol to his head a few hours after his mother removed a television set from his room, saying he wouldn't be returned until the boy quit complaining of being sick and went to school.

The teenager took the gun to his bedroom, wrote a suicide note and shot himself once in the head on January 26, court records showed Thursday.

The note, written in English, had to be translated for his Spanish-speaking parents, investigators said.

"In my heart I will take my TV with me. I love you," a suicide note read.

Investigators said the boy apparently wanted to watch TV more than he wanted to attend classes at Edna Hill Intermediate School in eastern Contra Costa County.

101-year-old heart repaired

SEATTLE (UPI) — George Crosby, 101, the oldest person ever to undergo open heart surgery, is preparing to go home to his wife, his cow and his vegetable garden in Port Townsend, Wash.

"I feel pretty good," said Crosby, who was scheduled for release from Seattle's Swedish Hospital Medical Center this weekend. "I'm just a little tired all the time, but I'll be all right when I get back to work."

Crosby and his wife, Lulu, 92, live in a two-bedroom mobile home in Port Townsend. They have a cow and a vegetable garden.

Part of Crosby's heart was replaced with cow tissue and he received a single artery bypass in a Jan. 31 operation performed by Dr. Donald W. Miller Jr. and Dr. Douglas D. Johnson.

Cockfighters refuse to pay fine

CLEVELAND, Tenn. (UPI) — Thirty-seven people arrested in a raid on a cockfight refused to accept $100 fines Thursday and demanded to battle prosecution in a trial because "the next thing they'll do is outlaw fishing or coon hunting."

"I'm a free American. We don't live in Russia. Who's got more rights — us or chickens?" asked J.C. Goins, who was arrested along with 84 others — including a school board member — during a Saturday night cockfight last month at the Rocky Top Game Club.

Most of the men and women pleaded guilty to attending a cockfight the night of the raid and paid a fine of $100 each. Four men charged with operating a gaming house were fined between $250 and $400.

The 37 who pleaded innocent packed a Bradley County courtroom where they waived preliminary hearings and were bound to the grand jury by General Sessions Judge Andrew F. Bennett Jr.

Babysitter sentenced to life

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Day-care center operator Eleanor Nathan was sentenced Thursday to 44 years to life in prison for the torture slaying of an 11-month-old boy and the beatings of 31 other children in her care.

Superior Court Judge Ronald Tochterman indicated he would have preferred to send Mrs. Nathan, 37, to prison for life without parole, but was restrained by law.

She was convicted Jan. 13 of first-degree murder, 20 counts of felony child abuse and 12 counts of misdemeanor child abuse stemming from her years as a baby sitter in Contra Costa County.

Massage parlor owners jailed

NEW YORK (UPI) — Twenty-two Manhattan massage parlor owners and managers and 46 Korean women they employed were in federal custody Thursday following overnight raids by immigration agents and city police in a major bribery investigation.

Two other suspects were arrested in Las Vegas and Toronto and held on charges of smuggling the illegal Korean aliens into New York through Canada.

Codenamed "Operation Handlebar," the raids on 27 midtown massage parlors culminated a 2-year investigation of the bribes, amounting to at least $130,000. Most of the bribe money was paid to undercover immigration agents for permanent residency cards for the illegal alien women, authorities said.

Dentists give $2 checkups

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Two dentists performed $2 checkups Thursday on children of jobless workers in the Louisville area, where unemployment has surged to 12.4 percent.

The dentists managed to see about 30 children in the first hour of the half-day offer at a dental clinic.

The offer was sweetened by several employed people who dropped in to donate money to pay the patient's share of the fee. "It's sort of fun to see that type of feeling," said Marte Hoagland, who handles the clinic's patient relations.

Fire destroys historic hotel

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Fire destroyed the 183-year-old Gettysburg Hotel Thursday and forced 20 firemen and four of the nearly 50 residents who fled the flames to a local hospital for treatment for smoke inhalation.

Flames could be spotted more than a mile away from the town, site of the Gettysburg Civil War battlefield and Lincoln's historic address.

and anti-Sharon demonstrator, chanted at each other, "Go home. Resign," and "We love you, Arik, King of Israel."

Police formed a special task force to investigate the incident, regarded by many as the worst outbreak of civil violence since the establishment of Israel in 1948.

"This was indescribable and intolerable," said Interior Minister Josef Burg, who runs the national police and whose only son, Avraham, was among the wounded, Armed Forces Radio said.

Burg called the incident "one of the most serious warning signs imaginable" to the nation of Israel.

"If there are differences, they are differences between brothers and it will be a tragic paradox if because of what happened north of the border in Sabra and Chatila (the Beirut massacre refugee camps) there will be casualties here."

Begin called the grenade blast "horrifying and shocking," and added: "The heart weeps over the young man who was murdered. No one knows who committed this crime. Woe to us should we accuse anyone without carrying a thorough investigation," he said.

Sharon, refusing to discuss his future, said "One thing alone interests me and that is to denounce and in every way possible and in public, the insane person or the insane people who were responsible for this obscene act."

A policemen said at least two policemen had been wounded in the hand-grenade blast.

The wife of one of the authors of the massacre commission's report, Supreme Court Justice Ahraon Barak, said an anonymous caller threatened her husband's life.

"We will not give your husband much longer to live," she quoted the caller as saying.

Police were assigned to the house of Barak and that of Supreme Court Chief Justice Yitzhak Kahan, another commission member.

would reopen hearings on the tax bill, however.

Kostmayer aide John Seager said 35 of the 435 members of Congress had agreed to sign the letter, although Parkhurst said he expected 100 congressmen to do so.

Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole said the administration was "very pleased" by Parkhurst's call to end the shutdown.

"American truckers must be free to drive again without fearing for their lives or the safety of their trucks," she said.

Parkhurst said his group had "been able to accomplish, for the entire industry, more than we have ever been able to in the past."

"No, I'm not satisfied with many aspects of the shutdown," Parkhurst said. "But the overall picture of the shutdown will not be complete until the final results of the necessary action by the Congress."

A congressional source close to the negotiations said, "The strike is deteriorating. Parkhurst is just trying to save face."

Dietsch said the steel haulers association was not happy about the announced end to the strike.

"We're very unhappy about it. We feel his arrangement with the authorities that we return to work on his suggestion and their promise of studying our problems is unacceptable.

"They've studied us to death. Millions of dollars have been spent on it. They know what our problems are, and it's a farce to study them further," Dietsch said.

In Washington, a spokesman for the House Finance Committee said his group had no intention of holding hearings on the tax measure before receiving a General Accounting Office report on the effect of the tax increases on independent truckers. That could take six months.

Ohio strike organizer Robert Shockley said truckers in his area would not return to the roads. "He (Parkhurst) has created a problem," Shockley said. "He has never been a guy to stick with anything."

Reaction from Parkhurst's allies in the ITA was positive, however.

Charles Brown, a spokesman for independent truckers in New Jersey, said he was "very pleased and thankful to know we are getting the support we deserve" from Congress.

Budget

by the end of the fiscal year on June 30 — as required by the Idaho Constitution.

Most state agencies would be subject to another 1.5 percent spending holdback on top of the 9.5 percent reduction ordered earlier in the fiscal year by the governor. Constitutional offices, the Department of Corrections and the Medicaid program in Health and Welfare would be exempt from the cuts.

The plan also calls for a $500,000 cut in the legislative budget, $2.25 million in diversions of dedicated accounts into the general fund, and other minor funds shifts and cuts.

In all, Republican supporters say the program would save the state $69.24 million by the end of the fiscal year.

But Democrats like Sen. John Peavey of Carey said the balanced budget would come at the expense of Idaho's children.

He said Idaho currently ranks 48th among the 50 states and the District of Columbia in its per-capita expenditure for students. Only Arkansas, Mississippi and South Carolina spend less on education, he said.

And Peavey said the $7.7 million cut will drop Idaho to 50th on the list — ahead of only South Carolina.

"I think it's a disgrace and we should be ashamed," he said.

Sen. John Barker, R-Buhl and chairman of the Senate Education Committee, said he wished it were possible to exempt schools from the budget plan. But he said the education system will still end up with $50 more per classroom than administrators had expected last year because of unexpected large dividends on insurance policies.

Risch said legislators should not look at the amount of money they pump into education, but should look at the results those dollars buy.

"Our children rank in the 85th percentile nationally on scholastic aptitude tests," he said.

The question of whether Idaho business should share in the burden of higher taxes also consumed much of the hour spent in debate.

Sen. Gail Bray, D-Boise, said the Legislature could have quickly raised more than $10 million, sparing education from spending cuts, if it had required that corporations withhold taxes on a quarterly basis and send that revenue to the state.

However, Republicans said the quarterly-payments proposal would place additional cash-flow burdens on a business sector still reeling under the effects of the recession.

Sen. Terry Sverdsten, R-Cataldo, said 249 bankruptcies have already been filed in Idaho this year.

Leftists say they should be in power

By JOHN E. NEWHAGEN
United Press International

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Leftist guerrillas warned the United States U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick Thursday "the only possible solution" to El Salvador's civil war was a new coalition government including their forces.

"Mrs. Kirkpatrick, the only possible solution that has been raised is the popular project of the FMLN (rebels), which brings the widest sectors of the country in the formation of a broad-based government," said the guerrillas' Radio Venceremos.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick was in San Salvador to meet with President Alvaro Magana, Defense Minister Jose Guillermo Garcia, acting Archbishop Arturo Rivera y Damas, as well as labor leaders and other officials, a member of her staff said.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick did not comment publicly on the guerrilla statement, which came on the same day as a report that Deputy Secretary of State Thomas Enders approved a working paper to the National Security Council recommending possible negotiations with the left to end the three-year civil war.

The Reagan administration's public position is that it would talk to rebels only if they put down their weapons first.

Washington has previously maintained that rebels would never be allowed to "negotiate their way into the government," saying leftists could enter into politics only through the electoral process.

Diplomatic sources familiar with the "working paper" said it does not represent a firm reversal of policy by Enders but is a basis for discussion of changes in U.S. policy in El Salvador.

They also said the paper was greeted with firm opposition by the NSC, directed by William Clark, a hardline opponent of negotiating with the leftists, his aides, and Mrs. Kirkpatrick, who was in El Salvador as part of a five-nation swing through Latin America.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said there was no change in policy in El Salvador, but he said he had no knowledge of the Enders memo.

One staff member accompanying Mrs. Kirkpatrick, who had stated earlier that the rebels had given up any hope of winning the civil war, said the U.N. ambassador had no knowledge of the memo.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick met Wednesday with Christian Democrats, including former Junta President Jose Napoleon Duarte and Constituent Assembly whip Julio Rey Prendes.

The staff member said Duarte was "a friend " of Kirkpatrick's and she had met with him several times in the United States.

She also held talks with far-right assembly President Roberto d'Aubuisson and members of his Arena party, as well as a third group of representatives from splinter parties.

Target plane crashes into Navy missile frigate

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — An unmanned target plane went out of control Thursday and slammed into the side of a Navy missile frigate testing a weapons system, killing a civilian observer.

Navy spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Dale Smith said the USS Antrim, a guided missile frigate, was conducting tests of the Vulcan-Phalanx weapons system off the Virginia Capes about 20 miles east of Virginia Beach when the accident occurred at 8:45 a.m. Thursday.

James Goldsmith of West Palm Beach, Fla., who was standing near the impact, was rushed to the burn unit of Norfolk General Hospital, where he died Thursday night. The Navy identified Goldsmith as an instructor with the Program for Afloat College Education.

The radio-controlled, jet-propelled drone punched an eight-by-three-foot hole in the Antrim's side in an equipment area just forward of the officers' berthing area.

Cmdr. William Wright, the Antrim's skipper, said Goldsmith was the only person near the explosion. "We had a small fire to which the men responded magnificently and put out within 10 minutes," he said.

Smith said the Antrim was testing the Phalanx system, which is a rapid-fire close-in weapons system similar to the "Gatling gun" of the Old West. He called it a "last-resort weapon," capable of firing 3,000 rounds of 20mm ammunition a minute to shoot down fast-approaching missiles, such as the French Exocet missile used by Argentina against British ships in the Falkland Islands war last year.

U.S. proposes chemical weapon ban

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — The United States proposed Thursday the destruction over 10 years of all the world's chemical weapons and their production facilities.

But there must be "systematic international on-site inspection" to ensure all stockpiles and factories are destroyed, U.S. delegate Louis G. Fields Jr. told the 40-nation Disarmament Conference.

He said progress on a chemical weapons ban, under discussion at the conference since 1977, had been prevented by Soviet refusal to accept such inspection.

"The Soviet Union needs to demonstrate, rather than simply profess, that it is genuinely ready to work out and accept effective provisions to verify compliance with a chemical weapons prohibition," he said.

The U.S. negotiator said the need to ensure compliance is proven by "the bitter experience of recent events in Sverdlovsk, Southeast Asia and Afghanistan."

Fields, presenting U.S. ideas on a chemical weapons ban, said Soviet proposals for national verification "are tantamount to self-inspection" and cannot be taken seriously.

"Before drafting of an actual treaty text can be productive, an acceptable verification and compliance framework must first be negotiated," he said.

There must also be "a stringent obligation to permit inspections on a challenge basis," Fields said.

Destruction of chemical weapons stockpiles and factories would have to be subject to "independent (and) impartial" inspection along with "facilities for production of chemicals which pose a particular risk."

These are so-called binary chemicals which have both civilian and military uses.

"We do not believe it necessary to subject the entire chemical industry of states to inspection, nor do we seek to have inspectors roam throughout the territory of a party," Fields said.

"Systematic international on-site inspection is necessary only at a limited and carefully-defined group of facilities, which must be declared," he said.

The United States is "not seeking absolute verification," Fields said. "We recognize that some risks will have to be accepted."

In other talks in Geneva, U.S. and Soviet negotiators continued parallel talks on limiting medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe and long-range strategic weapons systems, but in Moscow the official Soviet news agency Tass complained that the U.S. position had not "budged an inch" in 14 months.

Hormone, toxin kill cancer cells

BOSTON (UPI) — A combination of a hormone and a deadly toxin programmed to hunt down tumors can kill cancerous cells in the pituitary gland, laboratory and animal studies show.

The hybrid molecule, the first of its kind developed, seems to hunt down and kill only those cells where tumors develop in that brain gland, researchers from Harvard and Tufts medical schools said Thursday in the Boston Globe.

Mating other toxins with hormones — creating hybrid molecules — could be effective in attacking other glandular tumors and possibly other sites in cancer tissues that are natural targets of the hormones, said Harvard Dr. John Murphy and Tufts Drs. Seymour Reichlin and Patricia Bacha.

It attacks only the type of cell that is the natural target of the hormone in the pituitary, they said.

The hunter-killer molecule is made up of the deadly diphtheria toxin which is attached to a molecule of the hormone called thyrotropin-releasing hormone (TRH), which acts as a guide and carries the toxin to its target.

TRH is made by a gland called the hypothalamus and its function is to find and attach itself to certain cells in the pituitary gland.

Researchers in effect have attached a "stinger" to the tail of the hormone, then turned the hormone loose to find its normal target.

The pituitary is a small gland at the base of the brain and is central to many bodily functions such as growth, metabolism, response to stress and reproduction.

TRH causes the pituitary to release thyroid-stimulating hormone (TSH), which regulates the thyroid gland. It also causes the pituitary to release prolactin, which stimulates milk production.

Reichlin explained that the most common tumors that arise in the pituitary are prolactinomas, which originate in cells secreting prolactin. In some cases, untreated prolactinomas — in men and women — can enlarge enough to damage adjacent portions of the brain.

One way to diagnose the tumor is the untimely overproduction of milk in women and unnatural milk production in men.

The researchers say pituitary tumors account for about 10 percent of all head and neck cancers.

Three explosives charges added to kidnapping count

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (UPI) — Officials added three explosives charges Thursday to a kidnapping count against a man who carried five pipe bombs into a busy shopping mall and held a dozen people hostage for several hours.

Leonard Thomas Dunmore, 21, of Glenarden, Md., kept his finger on a detonator switch in a suburban Washington, D.C., mall for five hours Wednesday and demanded a radio station play his favorite records.

Dunmore's surrender came about two hours after police sawed through a plaster wall from an adjoining office to free some of the hostages. The others slipped out a door while the suspect was distracted by a police negotiator.

Dunmore, who police said has a history of mental problems, was charged with one count of kidnapping Wednesday night. Prince George's County Fire Department Capt. Jim Mundy said three felony explosives charges were brought against Dunmore Thursday.

Two charges were for the manufacture and possession of explosives, Mundy said, "One charge was for the five pipe bombs found ... at Landover Mall, the second for an explosive found in his residence."

Dunmore also was charged with attempting to dynamite the real or personal property of another.

He was being held at the county detention center in Upper Marlboro on $150,000 bond on the kidnapping charge, and an additional $75,000 for the bomb-related charges, Mundy said.

A county bomb squad removed the homemade explosive devices and while officials would not discuss their construction, Mundy said they "would have caused minor structural damage and major fragmentation damage."

Police said Dunmore stormed into the State Occupational Rehabilitation Center office in the mall at 2 p.m. EST, and at one point had 12 hostages.

Police Cpl. Ron Smith said Dunmore had a history of mental problems.

"He has been known by the federal government to make threats against the president and he was in fact committed to Saint Elizabeths (mental hospital in Washington) for those threats," Smith said.

During the takeover, Dunmore demanded he be supplied with iced tea and cigarettes and that a local radio station play all of David Bowie and Brian Eno's records, except for Bowie's "Electric Blue."

Hearing two views of the nuke future

Sometimes, the great world issues of the day are writ small in our hometowns. That's what has happened in Twin Falls this week in the coincidental presence of two speakers on opposite sides of the nuclear-freeze question.

One was retired Marine Gen. William Fairbourn, in town to boost the freeze movement. The other was Stephen V. Cole, a contributor to the conservative magazine American Opinion, who argued that America needs an even tougher stance toward the Soviets.

Cole thinks the Soviets are attempting to develop a first-strike capability against America. The way out, he believes, is further development of our nuclear and space warfare power. That, he claims, will force the Soviets to "abandon the arms race."

Fairbourn believes the Soviet strength is overrated and that American deployment of the Pershing missile in Western Europe only will set off another arms-race round. He sees the Soviets as a conservative, cautious and defensive people, perhaps paranoid that another power will invade them.

He thinks the Soviets see America's military build-up as such a threat and are responding in kind. A cautious effort to negotiate a mutual freeze on nuclear-weapons development and deployment makes the most sense now for American nuclear-policy strategy, he thinks.

Such complex questions occupy most of us only peripherally; we live, after all, with more mundane daily concerns. But it is well to pause occasionally to think about the directions of American nuclear policy.

Generally, we support the concept of a verifiable, mutual freeze on nuclear weapons. That is the position taken by every American president back to Harry Truman, and it is one that has allowed us to negotiate with the Soviets while maintaining a level of deterrence adequate to ensure our defense.

But we do not agree with Cole that America should furiously build a space-warfare capacity. That, in our minds, would only increase the chance of a confrontation.

Nor do we see the Soviet leadership as innocent, freedom-loving bureaucrats. They run an authoritarian society in which the kind of differences of opinion Cole and Fairbourn expressed would not be tolerated.

And there is some evidence that they would impose such a system on much of the world if they could.

With that in mind, we think a posture of flexible negotiation, with adequate strength, is the appropriate one. That may be less than either Fairbourn or Cole would want from their separate perspectives.

Keep wardens' law power

I have just finished reading your article in regards to Sen. Reed Budges' proposal to strip Idaho's Fish and Game Department conservation officers of their firearms. I believe this is the most idiotic idea, especially in light of the recent Claude Dallas "mock" trial, which I believe shocked most Idahoans at the flaws in our judicial system.

Most Fish and Game enforcement officers are better trained than the average law enforcement officers. They attend the Peace Officer Standards and Training academy in Boise, alongside regular law enforcment officers, in addition to the assorted science degrees they were required to possess to be employed by the Fish and Game Department.

In no other area of law enforcement are officers required to be in contact with violators who many times possess more weapons than the officers. Also, the Fish and Game officer more often than not is going to be on patrol by himself in remote areas, where the nearest help would be miles away.

I believe Sen. Budge should spend his time finding ways to support Idaho's Fish and Game officers, rather than hinder them. Our legal system has enough problems, as has recently been shown.

Dairy industry problems

How many of you have run afoul of some bureau that harrassed you until you wondered whether you were living in Russia or USA?

Take a look at the giant dairy industry built up in the United States. A bureaucrat in a good suit and dress shoes goes out to save the farmer. He recommends a loan to acquire land, then approves a loan to erect a complete milking unit with corrals, feed bunks for X number of cows. Now this is useless without the cows and the feed, so another loan is arranged with a bureau set up to finance livestock.

No allowance is made for loss, veterinary services or the competence of the borrower. A market with guaranteed price for the milk is assured with the produce going into storage -- this surplus not to be released except by Act of Congress. More millions paid in this government supported storage.

No man can borrow himself out of debt. No man can be independent when his mortgage for land and equipment exceeds the ability of the land to produce.

Neither can the problems of a nation be solved by the creation of more headless bureaucracies. These men sit beside you at the dinner table.

I wrote Sen. Symms regarding the buildup of the dairy industry in Jerome County. He answered saying: "No question but government lending agencies have been too enthusiastic in making dairy loans."

On one stretch of road we counted eight huge dairy farms. Any man who can gain the ear of some "expert" making government loans can start up in the dairy industry from scratch. His market is guaranteed by price support. The demand for his product has no bearing on his production. It is purchased by another government agency and stored at taxpayer expense. None can be released except by Act of Congress according to the Secretary of Agriculture. Not even to soup lines. At present some cheese has been released.

Suppose the government told Ford Motors, "Build all the cars you can. We will finance you and buy your excess production at more than market price and store it." I farmed from 1934 to 1973 without taking a dollar in crop loans. We retired in 1973, owning a fine, well-improved farm. It can be done.

Trucking tax is unfair

We are a small trucking business in Magic Valley and haul mostly hay to dairymen. We are opposed to the increasing taxation in the trucking industry.

The 5 cent-a-gallon fuel tax increase isn't what we're most concerned with. It's the federal excise-tax increase. Truckers pay a yearly tax of approximately $220 per truck. By 1988 this tax will increase 700 percent to approximately $1,800 per year per truck. We feel that is ridiculous. If truckers end up paying that tax, the cost will be passed on to you, the consumer. Independent truckers, those who own their own trucks, will be the hardest hit by this tax. We don't have nearly the business volume to absorb the tax that the big companies do.

In 1984 we also get a tire-tax increase. The tax on most car and pickup tires will cease and the tax on most truck tires will more than double. The tax on a 130 number tire is now $12.67. In 1984, the tax will raise to $30.50 per tire. That makes the total tax on 18 tires, $549. The price of tires is outrageous anyway. The average price of a new radial truck tire is $300.

Right now it costs us 7 cents a mile in fuel and road tax just to run our truck on the roads in Idaho alone.

We are not opposed to paying reasonale taxes but it sure seems that suddenly the government is "out to get" the trucker. As we said, these tax increases do not affect only the trucker, they will in time be passed on to the consumer.

Help keep the small man in business who is trying to haul your goods at a more reasonable rate. The big companies ae charging you more. Many pay union drivers while the independent drives his own truck, trying to make a living -- not a large profit.

Please write your congressmen and make your views known. Our congressmen are our voice in government. If enough people write, we feel it will be more productive than this strike and all its useless violence.

Much has changed in the half century since 1933

WASHINGTON — Newsweek magazine, for which I toil, was born nine years before I was and will survive me (in several senses). It recently celebrated its 50th birthday, occasioning this reflection: Since 1933, the conditions of American life have changed radically; the great questions of American life have not.

Fifty years is a lot of the life of this Republic. In 1933, a few veterans still remembered their battles of 70 years earlier--Vicksburg and Gettysburg. "The Romance of Helen Trent" went on the air. "Tobacco Road" went on Broadway. "God's Little Acre" went on the best-seller list. sirloin steak was 29 cents a pound and your typical lawyer, overpaid as always, earned $4,200 a year.

Since then, the emancipation of women and the democratization of higher education have gone far toward opening careers to talents. The oral contraceptive, the jet engine, the cathode-ray tube and the silicon chip have done more than any election has done to change American life. We have compressed time by accelerating social change; we have obliterated physical distance by air travel; we have annihilated imaginative distance by communications technologies that make every sight and sound accessible to everyone.

But in doing do we have jeopardized a capacity that distinguishes us from oysters--the capacity for astonishment. It is a paradox--and a problem--that as we have become more prolific with wonders, we have felt less wonder, even about the miracle of democracy.

In late winter, 1933, politics became national in a new sense: Government acknowledged what conditions taught, that our lives are woven together by an industrial economy. Beginning then, the urgent question--still an open question--has been: Can a people devoted to the widest possible scope for self-interestedness—a nation of aggressive individualism--think and act collectively as much as is required to secure the public interests. The New Deal altered, fundamentally and irrevocably, the relation of the citizen to the government, which became a powerful engine of distributive justice, influencing the allocation of wealth and opportunity, not least by underwriting the rights of organized labor.

In 1933, Congress created the Tennessee Valley Authority to operate a power plant at Muscle Shoals, Ala. Today, urban Americans, whose idea of the pastoral is Central Park, can not imagine the increase of American happiness wrought by rural electrification. In 1933, one in four Americans was working the land, and the land was blowing in the wind. But reclamation, irrigation, research--all sustained by government—turned agriculture into the most successful sector of American society in the subsequent half century. The bountifulness of California's central valley is a tribute to government's as well as nature's creativity.

It is perverse: After 50 years in which government has cushioned so many of life's sharp edges, it has fallen in esteem. A good shoe may be one you do not notice, but that is not true of good government. The accommodations required for an ameliorative state--the cost of public claims on private productivity--became the organizing questions of our domestic debate in 1933 and remain so in 1983.

Mobs lynched 42 persons in 1933. Baseball was white and the back of the bus was black, and nothing finer can be said of this 50 years than that in 1983 our children consider such social practices as bizarre and distant as we consider medieval medicine. In 1933 the problem of race was thought to be a problem of extending formal rights, especially the franchise. In 1983 we know that the task of enhancing equality of opportunity is staggeringly more complicated than that.

In 1933 Cole Porter was writing lyrics for a Broadway musical, "Anything Goes": "Good authors too who once knew better words Now only use four-letter words Writing prose, anything goes." Not anything, not then, but a judge did rule that a book published in Europe in 1922 could circulate here, four-letter words and all. The case was: United States vs. One Book Called "Ulysses."

But as Edmund Burke wrote at the time our Republic was born, "The effect of liberty to individuals is that they may do as they please: We ought to see what it will please them to do before we risk congratulations." These five decades have seen such dissolution of restraints, such coarsening of public expression, such flight from discipline, that civilized posterity—if there is one—will not congratulate us.

Newsweek's half-century coincides with the growth of journalism on a national scale. This nation's premise is that history is made not by impersonal forces but individuals' choices. However, since 1933 the choices have been becoming complicated faster than journalism has been becoming capable of clarifying complexities. Because history here is the history of the minds of free persons, the quality of the history we shall make in the next 50 years depends to an unprecedented, and perhaps dismaying extent, on the quality of journalism.

A reminder that love, like dishes, needs daily doing

BOSTON — The man walks up to the counter in front of me holding a $10 chocolate heart in a square wooden box. As I -- a victim of my passion for truffles -- wait to pay dearly for my indulgence, he issues crisp instructions for inscribing the heart in frosting letters to his wife.

There is something about his manner that I find oddly perfunctory, even chilling. Maybe it's an air of efficiency, or indifference. Here is a man, I think, on a chocolate-heart chore. Here is a man who has come in to perform some rhythmic ritual imposed by the calendar. Ah yes, Valentine's Day. Cross the heart off the shopping list.

I don't know a thing about this man, except for his age, middle, and his status, married, and his income, comfortable. For all I know he may regard this holiday as some merchandising scheme from the legions of florists, card sellers and candy makers.

But it strikes me in this store full of chocolate hearts and chocolate letters and chocolate cupids that this man is just doing his duty. As he Master-Charges this heart and files it into his briefcase, I feel like I've witnessed a scene of romance turned into routine. I'm reminded of how easily love can deteriorate into obligations. It is so easy to stop paying personal attention.

I don't think this occurs to most of us when we are young. The Valentine's Days of our youth are a confusion of romance and anxiety. It's hard sometimes to know the difference.

In grammar school, nervous messages about our own acceptability pass through the school post office. Would she give him a penny Valentine, right from the bag, while he favored her with a large one? Would he laugh if she sent him a card with the word "love" on it? What if she got no cards at all?

Throughout most of our first adolescent romances, we relay our feelings, like drumbeats, through a chain of friends, waiting for the right signals to come back. There isn't a chance that we'll neglect relationships then. Rather, we are obsessed over them.

Most love affairs, at any age, begin with this intensity, the intensity that comes in part from uncertainty and insecurity. We travel slowly through stages of knowing each other, accepting each other, choosing each other.

We don't know that the real tests of commitment come later. They come when caring is pitted against routine, dailiness, abstraction. When love is matched against dishes, work, bills, children.

It's not possible, it's not even desirable, to live in a permanent state of infatuation. We don't want forever to be striving for affection, showering our partners with flowers every Saturday, champagne for breakfast.

There is something in nearly every set of lovers that longs eventually for ordinariness. Affection also feeds on routines. We build up the inventory of a new relationship with days of comfortable companionship. A sense of commitment can grow with the shared enterprise of those same dishes, work, bills, children.

A friend of mine tells me that the sexiest thing her husband did last week was take her turn at the midnight feeding.

But there are centrifugal forces in any life. It's almost inevitable at times to start putting tasks first and saving relationships, like dessert, for last. Comfort and security also allows room for neglect.

I think that it's easy to lose track of what's at the center of any life together, the glue that holds things together: listening, talking, touching, caring, attention. The willingness — the will — to stop everything else and focus on another person.

Maybe I'm wrong about the man with the chocolate heart in his briefcase, maybe he is disinterested in valentines, but interested in his mate. I'll root for that.

Few of us want to be reduced in our lives to an annual rite. Few of us want to become an obligation instead of a pleasure.

A national holiday, a day of observance for romance, is fine. But love, like dishes, requires daily doing. Instead of paying homage, longtime love is supported on an installment plan. Those who want to keep it pay in a different coin. They pay attention.

Evans can live with budget measure

By BRIAN MOTTAZ
United Press International

SPOKANE — Gov. John Evans said Thursday he generally supports a $69.2 million budget bill approved by the Legislature, but he said he might find it necessary to make some "line item" vetoes.

Evans said he was glad lawmakers finally faced up to the reality of having to increase taxes in order to balance the state's fiscal 1983 budget.

By a 38-32 vote, the House Wednesday approved a bill calling for a one-cent increase in the state sales tax. Some Republicans in the GOP majority broke ranks to vote against the measure — some because of opposition to the tax increase, and others in opposition to further spending cuts.

The Senate narrowly approved the bill Thursday.

"I'll probably sign it, but I'm considering some line item vetoes," Evans said.

"My most serious problem with the bill is that it is cutting back on education from kindergarten right through the public schools to colleges and universities," he said.

"That's not the kind of commitment we should be making to public schools," Evans said. "I don't think we should be cutting back."

On the contrary, the governor said the state should be making more of a financial commitment to education.

Otherwise, the governor called the budget bill an "innovative way" of solving the state's shortfall problem.

Some lawmakers objected to the way in which all aspects of the budget-balancing chore were included in one bill, rather than splitting up the different parts of the plan into different bills.

"That's a legislative problem," Evans said. "I like to see several bills considering several different issues, but I recognize the leadership was trying to get a coalition."

On another subject, the governor voiced his support for a world trade conference scheduled next month in Spokane.

"I think it's going to be very successful in that it emphasizes the Northwest's role in world trade and commerce," he said.

The governor said there is no question that world trade will play an increasingly important role in the region's economy.

State House approves raising drinking age

By MARK SHENEFELT
United Press International

BOISE — The House approved 39-30 Thursday a bill to raise Idaho's minimum legal drinking age from 19 to 21 after sponsors gave graphic details of highway deaths caused by drunken teen-agers and urged their colleagues to "be emotional" about the issue.

More than an hour of frequently bitter debate preceded the vote, which was on the verge of killing the bill until several members switched their ballots on the House's electronic tally board at the last moment.

Rep. Robert Geddes, R-Preston, recounted a series of traffic accidents in his district which he said might not have occurred if the drinking age had been above the current age limit.

He told how a father of five was killed and his wife lost an eye in a wreck with a vehicle driven by a drunken 19-year-old; how a 17-year-old passenger died in an automobile driven by another drunken 19-year-old; and how is nephew, a student at Utah State University, was maimed for life in a collision caused by a young drunk.

"I hope you don't remove the emotionalism of this issue," Geddes said. "We should be emotional about this."

The chief sponsor of the bill, Rep. Linden Bateman, R-Idaho Falls, said statistics compiled by government agencies and service organizations showed overwhelming evidence that highway deaths among the affected group rose dramatically after the state lowered its drinking age a decade ago.

Opposition bottles up plan to tax pop

Idaho Legislature

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — About 60 Idaho businessmen and merchants rallied together Thursday to oppose proposed taxes on carbonated beverages.

In response, the bill's sponsor — Rep. Gordon Hollifield, R-Jerome — says he will amend portions of the legislation, but he insists that he will not back down on the concept.

Hollifield's measure would set a 5-cent tax on each can of soft drink sold in Idaho. He says the measure could generate up to $15 million annually.

"There are some things in the bill that weren't my intention," Hollifield said, after the lengthy hearing in the House Revenue and Taxation Committee.

"I'll see if I can limit these changes, so we can amend the bill on the (House) floor," he said. "If not, I'll pull it and rewrite sections."

Criticism came from numerous factions, including soda-pop bottlers, grocers, beet farmers, venders and fast-food restaurant owners. And committee Chairman Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert, noted that the attacks on Hollifield's bill were some of the harshest he'd ever heard.

"This has to be the poorest written bill I've seen in the 22 years I've been attending the Legislature," said Tim Brennan, a former lawmaker who now serves as a lobbyist for the Idaho Retailers Association.

"Any tax should have four basic qualities," he said. "It should be broad-based, affecting everyone. It should be easy to collect. It should not give a competitive edge to anyone. And the public should be able to know that they are being taxed.

"This bill violates all of these goals," Brennan said. "Perhaps the worst thing is that the tax would be hidden from the purchaser as simply part of the product's price. And that 5-cent-a-can tax would undoubtedly be matched by at least 5 cents in administrative costs."

All of those who testified against the bill recommended that the Legislature pass an increased sales tax if extra revenue is needed to fund government. They claimed that an overall sales tax was more fair than taxing a single commodity.

But Hollifield disagreed with that stand. "We have very few people who don't drink soft drinks. It is a luxury item and would make a very broad-based tax to help us bring in needed revenue."

Four alleged flaws were cited repeatedly by opponents testifying before the committee:

- A $200 licensing fee — meant to cover just the 14 bottling plants in Idaho — could be levied against every restaurant and drug store that adds its own carbonation to the soft-drink syrup purchased by bottlers.
- Vending machines — which would be taxed $10 each — are defined only as machines in the bill, which opponents claim could then apply to refrigerators and delivery trucks as well.
- The measure calls for all soft-drink cans and bottles to be given a tax stamp, but the bill also could apply to glasses and cups used by restaurants and pharmacies.
- Under the bill, individuals buying groceries or vacationing across state lines could be prosecuted for bringing in out-of-state soft drinks.

"This is a discriminatory tax that isolates carbonated beverages from other bottled beverages," said Robert Prasil of the Idaho Bottlers Association. "It will result in a 20 to 30 percent loss of business for us, which would mean laying off about 80 workers around the state."

Hollifield thanked the lobbyists for their comments and said several of the technical errors would be corrected. But he criticized some of their basic claims.

"I really question their estimated loss of business," he said. "I can't believe that this tax would deter that many people from buying soft drinks."

Hollifield also said that it may be possible to broaden his proposed tax to include other types of bottled and canned beverages that are not carbonated.

House Speaker Tom Stivers, R-Twin Falls, said he was not upset the budget-balancing bill received a great deal of opposition before a 38-32 vote Wednesday finally sent the measure to the Senate for consideration.

Risch says repeal of tax exemptions unlikely

By ELLEN MARKS
United Press International

BOISE — A plan to temporarily impose a 1-cent hike in the sales tax could raise up to $22 million in revenue for the fiscal 1984 budget, but lawmakers likely will not approve a repeal of sales tax exemptions or further tax hikes to aid next year's budget, legislative leaders said Thursday.

Senate President James Risch, R-Boise, also warned there will be "real difficulties" balancing this year's budget if Gov. John Evans vetoes a measure to solve 1983 funding problems through the temporary sales tax hike, budget cuts and the issuance of tax anticipation notes.

Risch said the plan to sell about $32 million in tax anticipation notes — a key component of the budget-balancing proposal — would be jeopardized if Evans rejects another provision to cut $7.7 million out of public school funding.

He said at a Press Club luncheon that bonding attorneys would "get antsy" if portions of the overall bill were rejected.

He added he did not think Evans may selectively veto parts of the bill, but must accept or reject the package as a whole.

"If that thing goes down, there's going to be real difficulties," he said. "It's the only realistic solution, and I think the governor understands that."

Excessive drinking is cause of many deaths

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR
United Press International

ATLANTA (UPI) — Excessive drinking is a major cause of death and injuries not only on the nation's highways but can be blamed for drownings, falls and fatal fires, federal health officials said Thursday.

The national Centers for Disease Control, citing studies conducted in four states and New York City, said the findings should prompt hospital emergency room doctors to test injured persons for alcohol, both to ensure appropriate medical treatment and to serve as a first step in helping people overcome alcoholism.

In its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report, the CDC said public concern has focused on the relationship between alcoholism and highway injuries, but "less generally recognized is alcohol's association with other injuries."

The agency cited studies conducted in Washington, Massachusetts, California and Maryland in addition to New York City to show the high percentage of non-highway deaths and injuries caused by alcohol.

A study of adult drownings in Baltimore demonstrated high blood alcohol concentrations in 21 of 45 victims, the CDC said.

A New York City study found that 41 percent of 54 fall victims, 46 percent of 28 fire victims and 53 percent of 19 drowning victims had alcohol blood concentration ratings of 0.10 percent or higher.

A CDC spokesman said a definition commonly used for drunken drivers is a blood alcohol reading of 0.10 percent.

In the Washington state study, alcohol use was found in 10 percent of 1,740 persons with fall injuries reporting to a large hospital emergency room. Alcohol was found in 22 percent of 78 fall "repeaters," persons who sought medical care for more than one fall injury during the one-year study.

The Massachusetts study based on hospital emergency room visits identified alcohol-positive readings of 0.01 percent and higher among 22 percent of 620 persons treated for injuries in the home.

Supplies delivered to mud-stranded Navajos

WINDOW ROCK, Ariz. (UPI) — Seven Army National Guard helicopters flew through sunny skies Thursday to deliver supplies to Navajo families stranded by deep mud resulting from two weeks of rain.

The return of clear weather, however, sparked concern the problem would worsen when 3-foot deep snow begins to thaw.

"Melting snow really creates problems in some areas," said Peter Barrow, spokesman for the Navajo Division of Public Safety. "The dirt out here is very unique — very sticky and like clay. It gets very slippery when wet and makes it very difficult to maneuver conventional vehicles."

Barrow said the airlift, which began last weekend, still had not reached some remote areas.

"We are going on the question of priorities, assessments made by police officers in the local areas," he said. "They know their areas and their people, which ones are not able to help themselves."

Replacements arrived Thursday morning for three helicopters that returned to Phoenix for maintenance. The replacements worked the portion of the sprawling 25,000-square mile reservation that lies in Arizona. Four helicopters delivered food, fuel and water to stranded people on the reservation in New Mexico.

Barrow said each helicopter reached 70 to 80 families a day.

"We will be on emergency status at least through Sunday," he said. "It all depends on the weather."

Barrow said the helicopters also lost some airlift time when they were needed for medical emergencies.

At least six people on the reservation have died, most from exposure, since an emergency was declared two weeks ago.

Alcohol may decrease coronary risk

By SHARON RUTENBERG
United Press International

CHICAGO — Inactive men drinking a moderate amount of alcohol each day raise their level of "good" cholesterol, associated with a decreased risk of coronary heart disease, researchers said Thursday.

"Good" cholesterol in the blood is known as HDLC, high-density lipoprotein cholesterol.

"The consumption of alcohol in moderation seems to be associated with increased HDLC levels in inactive men but not in men who engage in regular running or jogging," G. Harley Hartung and colleagues said in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"Our data suggest that nonexercisers can maintain levels of HDLC similar to those of individuals who jog regularly by ingesting three beers a day."

However, the researchers cautioned that more information is needed and alcohol should not be used for the sole purpose of raising "good" cholesterol levels.

Hartung's research team at Baylor College of Medicine studied 16 marathon runners, 15 joggers and 13 men who did not regularly exercise — all between ages 27 and 59.

None had a history of coronary heart disease or took medication that would affect the level of HDLC in their blood.

Routine alcohol consumption was similar in each of the three groups.

During the study, each man abstained from drinking alcohol for three weeks and then drank alcoholic beverages equivalent to three 12-ounce cans of beer daily for three weeks.

Blood levels of HDLC were measured at the start of the study and at the end of each three-week period.

Hartung's group found the joggers and inactive men had about the same levels of HDLC at the beginning of the study, while HDLC levels in the runners were higher.

In the inactive men, abstinence form alcohol resulted in a substantial drop in HDLC levels, which rose again to previous levels when drinking was resumed.

"Alcohol consumption did not influence HDLC level in runners and joggers, whereas it did have a significant impact on HDLC level in nonexercisers," they said.

But the researchers warned, "Alcohol used to increase HDCL level is not encouraged at this time, since it is not known whether increasing HDLC level reduces the risk of coronary heart disease.

"We are also aware of the considerable body of literature that links the excessive consumption of alcohol with adverse physiological and social conditions, including cirrhosis of the liver, hypertension, cardiomyopathy, pancreatitis and a host of social problems related to alcoholism," they said.

Bush optimistic after European tour

NORMAN D. SANDLER
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Vice President George Bush returned from a 12-day tour of Europe Thursday, saying his discussions with allied leaders have "lowered the level of misunderstanding" about President Reagan's commitment to nuclear arms reduction.

Arriving at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., from London, Bush told reporters his trip to seven countries and the Vatican as Reagan's emissary was "an exhausting but extremely gratifying journey."

Bush said he will tell Reagan at a meeting Friday that "his quest for peace, for nuclear arms reductions and bedrock commitment to defending our democratic values are strongly shared by our friends in Europe."

Secretary of State George Shultz also flew home to Washington Thursday, from Tokyo, and will report to the president Friday on his mission to China, South Korea and Japan.

George Bush returns from European trip

The vice president declared the Western alliance "strongly united" and reaffirmed NATO's resolve to begin deploying 572 nuclear-tipped Pershing II and cruise missiles in Europe in December if there is no agreement with the Soviets on an arms control treaty.

"In this," he said, "we are united and firm."

Reagan sent Bush to Western Europe to strengthen allied support for his arms policies, especially his "zero option" for eliminating intermediate-range missiles from Europe, as well as to blunt a Soviet propaganda blitz aimed at Europe's active peace movement.

Following his discussions in political leaders, including some from opposition parties, in West Germany, the Netherlands, Brussels, Switzerland, Italy, France and England with political leaders, including those of opposition parties, and with U.S. and Soviet negotiators in Geneva, Bush said:

"I hope there's more understanding about our commitment to the arms reduction side. I hope that we've lowered the level of misunderstanding that may have existed before the trip."

"I think we did some good in that regard," he said.

Detergent kills blackbirds

LAWRENCEBURG, Tenn. (UPI) — More than a half million blackbirds, sprayed with a detergent that removes protective oils from their feathers, died of exposure Thursday at a Lawrenceburg bird roost, a spokesman for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Agency said.

Al Stickley said the Wednesday night spraying of the birds with turgitol proved to be one of the most effective "I've ever seen." He said at least a half million probably were killed.

"We don't have them counted yet because of the rain," Stickley said, "but it might be as much as 90 percent."

Early estimates placed the population of the Lawrenceburg roost at one million birds. The flock's droppings can spread disease, officials said, and the birds had been destroying crops.

Similar sprayings in the past drew criticism from bird lovers, but there was no opposition this time.

The spraying was done with irrigation equipment similar to that used on farms, Stickley said. The equipment was put in position about a week ago by officials from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Agency, who then waited for appropriate weather to begin the spraying.

Stickley said the optimum temperature for turgitol was believed to be in the middle and upper 30s. But the temperature in Lawrenceburg did not reach its expected low Wednesday night, falling only to 42.

"This could mean that it doesn't have to be as cold as we thought it did for the spraying to be effective," Stickley said.

The spraying began at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday night and went on for three hours. The birds began dying early Thursday morning.

Attorney seeks halt to disability discrimination

By D'VERA COHN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The government asked a federal judge Thursday to drop a suit charging quota-setting in Social Security disability cases, but an attorney urged the court to stop "pressures and harassment."

The Association of Administrative Law Judges, representing more than 500 judges who rule on Social Security disability claims, filed suit last month claiming the Reagan administration is pressuring them to keep people off the rolls.

U.S. District Judge Joyce Hens Green heard two hours of arguments and promised to rule "as rapidly as we can."

She also allowed seven congressmen — including House Rules Committee Chairman Claude Pepper, D-Fla. — to file a friend-of-the-court brief on the judges' behalf.

The others are Reps. Paul Simon, D-Ill., Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., Bruce Vento, D-Minn., Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., James Jeffords, R-Vt., and Mike Synar, D-Okla.

The judges, who rule on claimants' appeals and grant most of them, said the administration is illegally reviewing records of judges who grant more than two-thirds of appeals. The government says it is simply following congressional intent, and that those judges are more error-prone.

Government lawyers argued individual judges' cases should be settled by the Merit Systems Protection Board, the federal personnel agency that is now considering four appeals.

Until then, the judges have suffered no harm the court can repair, they said. They also argued that only disability claimants — not judges — have a right to sue.

Eliot Richardson, former Health, Education and Welfare secretary representing the judges, said the judges' independence is impaired by government "pressures and harassment."

He said they have a right to act on behalf of both claimants and taxpayers who pay into the disability fund.

Richardson compared the judges to the Charlie Chaplin role of a hapless factory worker who is forced into ever-speedier performance on the assembly line in the movie "Modern Times."

"The result of all this individual pressure is to put us in the situation of Charlie Chaplin — and we're beginning to twitch," Richardson said, moving about to press his point.

Thieves ask $3.1 million

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Three journalists sped to a secret rendezvous on the countryside Thursday to act as go-betweens with kidnappers demanding a $3.1 million ransom for super-stallion Shergar. It was reported the kidnappers had threatened to cut off one of the champion horse's ears.

In Ireland, Chief Superintendent James Murphy, supervising the nationwide hunt for the $16 million Derby winner, said the kidnappers made their ransom demand Wednesday night in a phone call to the Aga Khan's stud farm.

The Aga Khan is a major member of a 34 person group which owns the celebrated horse.

One report said the five or six armed kidnappers had threatened to cut off one of the ears of the 5-year-old horse, which won the English and Irish Derbies and was named Europe's "Horse of the Year" in 1981.

Murphy told reporters in Newbridge, near the studfarm 20 miles west of Dublin, that he believed the thieves were genuinely trying to make contact with people in racing.

The three racing commentators summoned from London to Belfast left by car after receiving an anonymous telephone call. They went to the house of a leading trainer in the village of Ardglass, 30 miles from Belfast, according to reporters and cameramen who followed them.

"We definitely want him back," said Independent Television News commentator Derek Thompson. "He is one of the greatest horses I have seen."

Laser phone line gets switched on

NEW YORK (UPI) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co. Thursday flipped on the switch to the world's largest laser-powered telecommunications system, beaming 5,000 phone calls simultaneously along a half-inch thick cable between New York and Washington, D.C.

Bell officials said the fiber-optic cable is capable of transmitting voice, data and color video pictures at a speed of 90 million bits of information per second. Eventually it will be able to carry almost double the 130,000 simultaneous phone conversations of the conventional 2 ¼-inch coaxial copper cable.

"We have harnessed light and its incredible capacity to move large amounts of information over great distances," Robert W. Kleinert, president of AT&T's Long Lines Department, said at a news conference. "Light pulses, rather than electrical signals, will be the workhorses of the information age."

Using just one strand of the hair-thin glass cable fiber, the entire contents of Webster's 2,700 page unabridged dictionary can be transmitted in six seconds. Officials said the laser cable will result in fewer transmission errors than with copper cables.

Although the system will have the capacity to bring color video directly into the home, officials said they had no plans to distribute commercial TV programs using the system.

Since 1977, the company has installed about 100,000 miles of optical fibers serving some 50 cities. However, most of the routes stretch only 20-30 miles.

Bombs hit Iran, Iraq claims

By United Press International

Iraqi warplanes bombed Iran's major border cities Thursday and its ground forces captured more than 1,000 Iranian troops in a 12-hour battle, the Iraqi and Kuwaiti news agencies reported.

The battle marked the bloodiest fighting of the 28-month Persian Gulf war.

"More than a thousand of them (Iranians) gave themselves up to the Iraqi troops while the corpses of others have littered the battleground," the official Iraqi news agency said, quoting the Baghdad high command.

"The isolated Iranian force tried to flee but our forces completely encircled it, blocking all reinforcement and withdrawal routes, leaving no choice for them but either to surrender or be wiped out," the Iraqi command said.

Tehran Radio reported, however, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini told foreign delegates participating in the fourth anniversary of his takeover that Iran's forces were victorious in the battles so far.

The Kuwaiti News Agency said official Tehran Radio broke into its regularly scheduled broadcast to report Iraqi air strikes on the southwestern Iranian cities of Abadan, Dezful and Ahvaz. The Iraqi news agency confirmed the report.

As air raid sirens blared, Iranian residents were ordered into underground shelters, Kuwait radio said, quoting a Tehran broadcast.

The latest Iranian attack began in the Shib area, the frontline between Iran and the Iraqi province of Misan, 200 miles southeast of Baghdad, Wednesday night, and ended with an Iranian surrender early Thursday, the INA said.

Iran launched Monday what it said would be the "final offensive," but the Iraqi military said the attack was repulsed like three previous ones since July 1982.

Marcos sends more men at rebels

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — President Ferdinand Marcos' government Thursday poured another 2,000 troops into a counter-offensive against communist rebels in the southern Philippines.

The Armed forces deputy chief, Lt. Gen. Fidel Ramos, told the official Philippine News Agency that three army battalions and a company of scout rangers had been sent to beef up three marine battalions dispatched two weeks earlier.

Two navy gunboats and 10 helicopters were also deployed in the campaign against guerrillas of the New People's Army, the military wing of the outlawed Communist Party, on the island of Mindanao.

The communists, whose nationwide armed strength is estimated by authorities at 5,000, are seeking to overthrow Marcos, who has been in power since 1965.

The government offensive is under way in the provinces of Davao del Norte, Davao del Sur, Davao Oriental, Agusan del Sur, South Cotabato and Bukidnon, 500 to 600 miles south of Manila.

The provinces are located in the northeastern section of Mindanao, where the government is also fighting Moslem separatists.

The war against the seperatists has claimed more than 60,000 lives over the past 11 years, but the level of clashes has gone down recently. There are no reliable estimates on the number of lives lost in the fighting involving the communists.

Foreign dogs are being booted off of Bali

JAKARTA, Indonesia (UPI) — In an unusual display of xenophobia, Indonesia's resort island of Bali is throwing out pets of foreign origin — and dogs are suffering the most.

Authorities in Bali have expelled 1,378 dogs of foreign breeding this month and killed 56 others which could not find asylum outside the popular resort island, a spokesman said Thursday.

Nine monkeys and a squirrel of foreign breeding have also been declared "anima non grata," but their fate was still unknown.

Bali Gov. Ida Bagus Mantra, reviving an old regulation on rabies issued under the Dutch colonial rule, outlawed all dogs and pets of foreign breeding from the island, 600 miles east of Jakarta.

Local authorities said Bali was rabies-free and described Mantra's ruling as "a preventive measure."

Only pets of foreign breeding are suspected of being potential carriers of rabies. Some 200,000 Balinese mongrels and thousands of local monkeys remain scot-free.

Even if they were born on the island, authorities view German shepherds, pekinese, dalmatians and chows as foreign dogs.

Whittom says BPA planning new rate hike

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Mayor Bill Whittom of Rupert has launched a "one-man crusade" against what he claims may be a large, wholesale electric-rate increase by the federal Bonneville Power Administration, beginning Nov. 1.

The BPA, which sells power to Rupert, is planning a rate increase. But at this point, BPA officials don't know how much it will be until Feb. 28, when studies are complete and a tentative proposal is announced, Robert Reed, a BPA public-information officer in Portland, said Thursday.

However, an official with the Public Power Council, which represents BPA customers, said the utilities should expect a 35 percent wholesale rate increase in November.

Whittom's crusade began this week when he received a notice from the council, which reported the BPA's intent to raise wholesale rates — the rate it sells power to utilities. No specific rate increase was mentioned in the notice, however.

But earlier, Whittom said that he had heard "rumors" and indications from several other regional utilities that the rate increase would range between 19 percent to 60 percent. Then, he said he called a "reliable" BPA source, who did not want to be identified. Whittom's "source" said the increase would be between 50 percent to 70 percent, the mayor says.

Any large rate increase would be "totally unacceptable" and would "devastate" already burdened electric customers, Whittom says.

He notes that there was a 60 percent wholesale rate increase from the BPA in October. This increase affected Rupert and other BPA customers, which include many southern Idaho cities and rural cooperatives.

Whittom says that he has asked Idaho's congressional delegation to help him fight the forthcoming rate increase. The Rupert mayor also is seeking the aid of local residents, by asking them to submit testimony of what would happen to them if the increase goes into effect.

"I will do whatever is humanly possible from this end to get it stopped and fully accounted for," Whittom says. "It's atrocious. It will cause people to pay power bills, rather than food bills."

He says that he wants "every nickel" of the BPA increase justified.

As a federal agency, the BPA must seek approval from the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission for any rate increase, says former power council representative Larry Burbank of Rupert. However, the BPA may begin rate hikes before commission approval, says Burbank, the assistant manager of the Rural Electric Cooperative.

Burbank declined comment on what he thought of Whittom's statements, saying only that they sounded like "grapevine information."

Although the BPA may raise the price of its wholesale power to Rupert, it doesn't mean that Rupert electrical customers will see the exact same rate hike on their power bills. The BPA wholesale rate is only part of a utility's costs, so utility customers will not see that high of an increase, said Link Wolverton, the power council's director of technical projects.

In the past, the power council has "whittled" high BPA requests down to more acceptable levels, Burbank says.

The anxiety about what the BPA will do with its rates may be lessened Feb. 28, when the agency announces its tentative rate structure, which probably will be altered as time goes on, Reed says.

The BPA needs regular rate increases to keep up with inflation, pay operating costs and repay debts for the construction of hydropower projects that supply energy to the Northwest, Reed says.

By law, the BPA is not allowed to make a profit and must be self-sufficient through its revenue, which is derived from power sales.

Western Airlines being wooed to replace Republic

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — No commitments have been made, but a meeting with a senior official of Western Airlines has encouraged local officials in their efforts to lure a major carrier to the area as a replacement for Republic Airlines.

Craig Benedetti, Western's vice president for marketing, met privately Wednesday in Sun Valley with officials representing Sun Valley, Ketchum, Twin Falls and the state of Idaho.

Benedetti had met with representatives of key lodging properties in the tourist area on Monday.

"Of all the cities that were affected by the Republic pullout, we were the first to contact him," said Deborah George, the executive director of the Ketchum-Sun Valley Chamber of Commerce. "It worked out beautifully."

Among those attending the Wednesday session were: Chris Talkington, the mayor of Twin Falls; Tom Courtney, the Twin Falls city manager; Mike Dolton, the executive director of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce; Ruth Lieder, the mayor of Sun Valley; Jack Brown, the Sun Valley city administrator; Jim Jacquet, city administrator for Ketchum; and David O. Porter, the director of the Idaho Division of Economics and Community Affairs.

Benedetti reportedly was skiing in Utah on Thursday and could not be reached for comment.

Last week, Republic Airlines announced that it would cease service to Twin Falls and six other western cities, including Boise and Spokane, effective April 24. The move leaves Twin Falls with two Utah-based commuter airlines — Transwestern, which provides daily flights to Salt Lake City and Boise, and Skywest Airlines, which will begin daily service between Twin Falls and Salt Lake City on March 1.

From the time of Republic's announcement, local officials have promised to seek a major carrier as a replacement.

"The commuters are a good service, but their maximum capacity is like a 19-passenger Metroliner, non-pressurized cabin," Dolton said. "The volume (of passenger use) here shows we can justify a major carrier."

According to George, the Western executive indicated that his company was researching the Twin Falls-Sun Valley market.

"His reaction was extremely positive, and we're beginning to pursue several different plans," she said. "He'll be getting back to us after his market research is in."

Earlier this week, Twin Falls city officials acknowledged that they had made inquiries with Western. They had said previously that two or three major carriers had been contacted, but have declined to identify the other companies involved.

While the sessions are cause for encouragement, "there's nothing signed on the dotted line that says, 'Yes, we're going to be here,'" Dolton warned Thursday. But, he added, "It was a real positive meeting. We're all encouraged about it. And we hope something happens in the near future."

Escaped murderer 'relieved' at capture; faces 'life' again

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — After eight-and-a-half years of freedom, a convicted Twin Falls murderer again faces life in prison, but he says that he feels only relief in the face of that gloomy possibility.

Donald Leroy Schoonover, 58, has told authorities that he is "just relieved" to no longer be an escaped convict in hiding. He was arrested Jan. 28 near Seattle, Wash., on a fugitive warrant, after walking away from Idaho authorities in Boise in 1974.

"Mr. Schoonover is now being held in the Ada County Jail here in Boise," Michael Flanagan, the Ada County deputy prosecutor said Thursday. "His preliminary hearing on the escape charge has been postponed a week, but frankly, his biggest problem right now is having to again face that life sentence for murder."

Schoonover was convicted of killing his mother-in-law, Veran Turner, in Twin Falls on Dec. 31, 1959, during a custody dispute with his wife over their two children. According to court records, Turner was caring for the youngsters at the time of the killing.

A preliminary hearing will be held Feb. 18, as Ada County authorities seek to move Schoonover into district court to face charges of escape.

"His problem isn't the escape case, however," Flanagan said. "He already has made statements to the press that he walked away.

"What really matters is how the parole board treats his still-standing life sentence," he said.

Schoonover served about 14 years behind bars before being paroled in 1974, despite recommendations by Judge Theron Ward, of the Fifth District Court in Twin Falls, that he never be released from prison. Ward sentenced Schoonover in 1960.

But Schoonover was returned to prison that same year for a parole violation — reportedly for fighting with his wife again. A short time later, however, he managed to slip away from Ada County authorities while attending an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting.

Since that time, Schoonover has lived mostly in the Seattle suburb of Burien, under the false name of Jose Rodriguez. All that time, he apparently worked odd jobs, remarried — his first wife died in 1965 — and stayed completely out of trouble.

According to Seattle sources, his neighbors were shocked by the arrest, saying that Schoonover was a model citizen. They described him as quiet, friendly and a man who helped others and always kept his house repainted.

"The fact that he apparently has led a quiet life could reduce the credence of testimony given during his original sentencing," speculated Flanagan, who won't be involved in the parole board's review of the murder sentence.

During his sentencing in 1960, a Pocatello psychiatrist claimed that Schoonover would be capable of murdering again if pressured by similar circumstances.

"There's no way to know how the parole board will interpret all this new information," Flanagan said. "It's a whole new ball game for Mr. Schoonover. He may well be facing a renewed life sentence."

Schoonover's defense attorney, Kent Powers of Boise, agrees with Flanagan's assessment.

"If he was just facing the escape charge, I wouldn't lose any sleep," he said. "But I definitely am losing sleep over the parole board's pending review of his life sentence."

Powers requested that Schoonover's preliminary hearing on the escape charge be postponed "because frankly, I need time to understand all that has gone on. I just don't have all the facts in this case. I don't know where he stands."

The parole board, however, will not review Schoonover's murder sentence until the escape charge is settled, and Schoonover is transferred to the state prison.

'Singing valentines' serenade loved ones

TWIN FALLS — Instead of sending a loved one a calorie-filled candy this Valentine's Day, you can send a "singing valentine," via the local chapter of the American Cancer Society.

Several county chapters again are offering this unusual Valentine's Day greeting this year.

For a $10 fee in Twin Falls County, several volunteers will serenade the valentine of your choice, at the place of your choice, with a song of your choice, says coordinator Barbara Smith.

The song selections are: "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," "A Bicycle Built for Two," "I Want a Girl Just Like the Girl That Married Dear Old Dad," and the most popular, "You Are My Sunshine."

Smith says that the volunteers even will sing their rendition of "Happy Birthday" upon request.

The singing volunteers are Carol and Wendy Coonts; Smith and her son, Scotty; and Ashley Bliftpinghoff, all of Twin Falls.

They will arrive costumed like such familiar characters as E.T., Bugs Bunny, Tweety Bird and Sylvester the Cat, Smith says. Mr. and Mrs. Ape and a pink elephant also are available, she says.

The group will do its valentine singing today through Monday, Smith says.

Request forms for the service can be obtained at Pennywise, First Security Bank in downtown Twin Falls and Norm's Cafe, she says.

Or you can order a singing valentine by calling Smith at 733-4335. In Jerome County, call Dave Sherman at 324-8827; in Gooding County, call Florence Sandy at 837-4354; in Blaine County, call Vera Hill at 788-2327; and in the Buhl area, call Holly Howell at 543-6591.

Proceeds from the service will be used to aid cancer research, Smith says.

P&Z rejects rezoning in Buhl area

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission has reversed its previous stand by overwhelmingly rejecting plans to place commercial operations near Buhl.

Zoning board members, on a 7-1 voice vote Thursday night, sided with critics of Cecil Lyons' request to rezone his 180-acre parcel, located off U.S. 30, one mile west of Buhl, for commercial and residential use.

The critics argued that commercial operations would pose environmental, traffic and aesthetic problems for surrounding residential and agricultural properties. The opponents had no objection to Lyons' proposal to use the bulk of the property for residential development, however.

Accordingly, the board rezoned the entire parcel for residential development, with a minimum lot size of 2.5 acres.

BID board decides to hire manager for downtown mall

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Money to hire a downtown mall manager will be included in this year's budget for the Twin Falls business improvement district, the BID board voted Thursday night.

Although the BID must have its budget approved by Twin Falls City Council before it can spend any money, board members said a hiring committee would begin accepting resumes for the position immediately.

The vote came as the board hammered out a rough draft of a $41,000 budget to carry the BID through the end of the fiscal year, in October.

The budget must be finalized by the BID budget committee, and a hearing held in front of BID members, before it may be submitted to City Council.

The board voted unanimously to allocate $5,600 for the office and salary of a part-time manager.

The duties of the position would include coordinating activities and promotions, acting as liaison between the board and individual BID members, serving as a community spokesperson and researching, the board indicated.

The board voted to split the remaining $35,200 between a downtown beautification project and promotional advertising.

Of the promotional money, $12,000 will be spent between now and September, with the remaining $5,600 to be held as a reserve against next Christmas and unforeseen expenses, the board decided.

The beautification plan, presented by Chris Valence, would focus on better maintenance of, and new planting for, the existing downtown mall and city parking areas.

Thirty-eight new trees also would be planted on the blocks, at either end of the present mall. Eventually, the plan calls for new benches and posts also to be installed on those blocks.

There was no agreement as to where the BID advertising money would be spent. It was agreed, however, that some should be used for "image-building" and some for special promotions.

BID board Chairman Craig Smith said the BID would follow the same process as the city in selecting its manager. A pool of applicants will be screened by a hiring committee, with finalists being interviewed by the entire board.

Burley will seek grant for park

BURLEY — The city of Burley will remind the state Parks and Recreation Department that it's still interested in a $127,000 grant.

The city wants the grant to purchase part of a 72-acre farm for a community park southeast of Burley.

About two years ago, the city applied for the grant, to buy the remainder of the farm, which is owned by the Nielson family, Mayor Chuck Shadduck says. The city's request for funding, however, was not granted and the department ran out of grant funds.

With the availability of new funds, City Council decided at its Monday meeting to re-open its application, which is presently on file with the department in Boise, Shadduck says.

No re-application is necessary, however, says city Clerk Bud Brinegar. The city simply will be reminding the department that it still would like to be considered for the funds.

About 20 acres of the farm have been purchased by the city in five-acre parcels over a five-year period of time, Shadduck says.

The grant would allow Burley to develop the property sooner than if it buys one section at a time, Shadduck says.

The city plans to create a large community park. And depending on the growth of the city, there are plans to add a fire and electric substation and an additional water well, Shadduck says.

The mayor says that he has heard of private plans to develop the area around the farm, which is located less than a mile outside the city limits.

None of the land has been developed because the acreage's only good entrance is not yet owned by the city, Shadduck says.

The city's land is being farmed on a rental basis, which helps cover the costs of buying the land, according to the mayor.

He did not know when the department would decide on the city's grant application.

Kimberly gives BLM easement

KIMBERLY — A unanimous decision Tuesday night by Kimberly City Council gave the federal Bureau of Land Management easement rights into the Snake River Canyon.

The easements sought by the BLM are located on 40 acres of property near Twin Falls, north of Kimberly. The city is now using the area as a refuse facility.

The easements granted to the BLM are 20-feet wide at the top of the canyon and 100-feet wide at the bottom, following switchback trails into the canyon.

According to Mayor RosaLea Whitehead, this will ensure the BLM and the public perpetual access through city property. No improvements will be made, said Whitehead.

New public gravel pit opened

SHOSHONE — A new common-use area near Twin Falls for the public to remove sand and gravel has been opened this week by the federal Bureau of Land Management.

With the opening of the new site, the BLM has closed the present common-use area site, known as the Perrine Pit.

The new sand and gravel pit, to be known as the Great Flood Common Use Area, is located on the north side of the Snake River, about four miles from the Perrine Bridge.

The area consists of sand and gravel, ranging in size from small pebbles to rocks up to 10 inches in diameter.

Persons interested in obtaining material from the site should contact the Shoshone BLM office for a permit and a map to the site.

Material removed from the site may be used for private use only, not commercial use.

There is a limit of 100 cubic yards of material that may be removed from the site by one person per year. The cost of a permit is 30 cents per cubic yard, although a $5 minimum will be charged for each permit.

Driver arrested on 3 charges

JEROME — Roger Louis Rue, 36, of 116 F Avenue in Jerome, was arrested by Jerome police early Thursday morning and charged with battery, driving while intoxicated and resisting an officer.

Rue has been released on his own recognizance. He will appear in Fifth District Magistrate Court in Jerome next Thursday.

Sgt. Lonny Meadows said an officer was stopped by Mrs. Rue about 12:41 a.m. Thursday. The woman requested help from the officer, Meadows said, and at that time, the defendant drove up. Meadows said that Mr. Rue pulled his wife from her car, and when an officer went to her assistance, the suspect began fighting with the officer.

During the scuffle, Meadows said, Rue fell into a plate-glass window and suffered lacerations about the head and hands. He was treated at St. Benedict's Hospital and released.

No information concerning the juvenile was available.

Police said the two were arrested after they were seen using a ladder to reach the roof of the Safeway store at 1147 Filer Ave. E.

Brown was arraigned later in the day in Fifth District Magistrate Court, where he requested a preliminary hearing into the charge. The public defender has been appointed to represent him.

Brown was released without bond.

Bull killers enter guilty plea

JEROME — Three Minidoka County men pleaded guilty Tuesday, when they were arraigned in Fifth District Court in Jerome on charges of killing a prize Angus bull.

Court records show that Steve Wesley Timmons, 32, and his brothers, Virgil Gene Timmons, 34, and Eddie Dale Timmons, 27, stopped at a pasture where John Brooks, a Jerome County rancher, kept his cattle, last Dec. 26. The investigation showed that hay was dropped at the pasture gate to lure the bull to the fence, where it was shot and killed, and then loaded into a pickup truck.

The truck later stalled, and a passing motorist, who stopped to offer assistance, notified officers of the carcass in the truck.

Officers said the registered Angus bull, valued at about $2,000, was dropped over the Snake River Canyon, near the Murtaugh Bridge, as officers were pursuing the suspects.

The three men, from Heyburn and Rupert, were charged with grand theft, a felony.

Judge Daniel Meehl ordered a presentence investigation.

Lyons

The zoning board's decision comes in the form of a recommendation to the three-member county commission, which will make a final decision following another public hearing.

Lyons wanted to rezone for commercial use two areas — one about 425 feet back from the north side of U.S. 30, about 12.9 acres, and another about 660 feet back from the south side of the highway, about 20 acres.

Last December, the zoning board, on a tie-breaker vote, pulled the proposal from the parliamentary "table," where it had sat for three years, and then passed it without holding another public hearing.

However, deputy prosecutor Dennis Voorhees later concluded that a public hearing was required. The county commission, after conducting a public hearing of its own, followed Voorhees' recommendation that the matter be sent back to the zoning board.

Thursday's hearing produced arguments similar to those heard by the county commissioners.

Opponents presented a series of letters and a petition bearing 30 signatures that opposed the commercial zoning designation. They argued that such development would create a traffic hazard along the highway, lower property values and contaminate groundwater and irrigation-water supplies.

"Why degrade our noble land with the unbecoming crown of a junkyard," said Dale Quigley of Twin Falls. "We do not believe that commercial-general (zoning) is compatible with the residential-agricultural (zoning) or the agricultural land in the area."

Commercial sewage operations would threaten to contaminate groundwater supplies, he added.

"We know, generally, what goes into a residential sewage system. We have no idea, nor do we have control over what goes into a commercial sewage system," he said.

But Lyons' plans to develop residential units in the area generated support from the opponents.

"Nothing could be nicer than some lovely homes on some two-and-a-half acre parcels," Quigley said. "We sincerely believe that. However, the support is conditional."

Quigley argued that Lyons should be required to submit a detailed plat of his development plans, provide dedicated roads and undertake proper sewage and waste-system planning in the area.

Another critic of Lyons' plan was the zoning director for the city of Twin Falls, LaMar Orton, who appeared on behalf of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. LaMar W. Orton of Buhl.

"They've asked me to be their family spokesman tonight, and I'm speaking for them, myself and my wife and no one else," Orton said.

Orton argued that the proposed commercial designation would violate provisions of the county's comprehensive land-use plan, partially because it would lead to urban sprawl.

Orton also questioned the conclusion of the zoning board's review committee, which called on the zoning board to delete commercial development on the north side of the highway.

"If commercial development is on one side, it's going to go on the other side," Orton said. "That would be the first step to continued encroachment in that area."

But Buhl Mayor Jim Barker supported Lyons' plan as a pro-development concept that was in the city's interest.

"City Council is concerned that we have growth and that we have orderly growth, and we support his efforts in this regard," Barker said. "I feel we should support Cecil in the things he's doing if he does it right."

The zoning board's vote to reverse its earlier endorsement may have been as much a reflection of the changed composition of the board as it was of the opponents' arguments. Five of the eight zoning board members voting Thursday assumed office last month.

Likewise, a new county commissioner, Judy Felton of Buhl, will consider the issue for the first time. Felton had not been sworn into office when the county commission first considered the matter.

Committee will try to fund sewer project

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — A new committee — to carry the ball toward a long-time community goal in Jerome — was named Tuesday night during an informational meeting on the proposed South Lincoln Street sewer project.

Carl Butler, the chairman of the Jerome County commission, conducted the meeting, which was attended by a group of individuals and agency and organization representatives. Those in attendance hope to see the sewer project completed, in order to open the area south of town to commercial and industrial development.

The committee will be headed by William Allred of Jerome, an environmental specialist with the South Central District Health Department. He was appointed by Butler and asked to call a meeting in the near future.

The committee will contact property owners in the area to be served by the proposed improvement, as well as other interested individuals.

The committee will be seeking answers to how to raise the $63,000 needed to pay for the local share of the $289,500 project.

Gerald Martens, the consulting engineer for the project, and Donna Batch-Petrie, an economic planner for the Region IV Development Association, explained that funding may be possible through formation of a sewer district, a local improvement district, a non-profit corporation or by application by a local governing agency for a Farmers Home Administration loan.

Others named to work with Allred are: Robert L. "Buzz" Miller and Ollie Adfield, property owners on South Lincoln Street; Lanny Sloan, the public works director for the city of Jerome; Jerome city Councilman Henry Pharris, who also represents the Jerome Development Corp.; county Commissioner Pam Smith; Ethel Nelson, the manager of the Jerome Chamber of Commerce; Martens; and Batch-Petrie.

Batch-Petrie said the project is now in the No. 1 priority spot for the eight-county regional development organization that she serves. That means Region IV will be giving its full support to a grant application for $173,700 from the federal Economic Development Administration. The grant is needed to fund 60 percent of the project.

Another $52,000 of the total cost is represented by a sewer line to part of the area, which has been installed by private funding, Martens said.

He said a private developer purchased and installed between 3,500 and 3,600 feet of sewer line when Mountain Bell was trenching for new telephone lines.

Martens said the proposed sewer line, if installed, would serve about 575 acres of land, running roughly a half-mile east and a quarter-mile west of Idaho 79, from the Jerome city limits to the intersection of I-84, south of town.

The county's comprehensive plan designates that area for commercial and industrial uses.

"There is no question but what this area, between town and the interstate, is going to develop for business and industry," Miller told those attending the meeting. "But it can't grow until there is a sewer to serve the developers."

Martens said the proposed line could serve the equivalent of 400 homes. He said that would handle motels, restaurants and other service-type establishments on the south end of the project, plus industries and other commercial establishments closer to town.

Martens said that a sewer district, non-profit corporation or other project sponsor could assess or borrow the $63,000 in local matching funds that are needed and could repay it by charging hook-up fees.

Cable operator asks council to relinquish its rate control

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Gene Ritnour, the owner of Magic Valley Cablevision, has asked Jerome City Council to approve a revised franchise agreement, which would cover 15 years and would eliminate a present policy requiring city approval on rate increases.

Ritnour met with the council last week to answer questions the council might have regarding the upcoming franchise renewal.

The cable TV official said he would like to extend the franchise period from 10 to 15 years in order to help him arrange financing for planned cable improvements.

He said Jerome is the only one of the seven communities his firm serves where Cablevision cannot control rates without city approval.

"There is no place for such rate controls in free enterprise. We are not a public utility but a private business," Ritnour said.

He said there is competition in the field, and the consumer is the one who decides if the rates are too high. Ritnour said that eventually, Magic Valley Cablevision will be putting in an all new system in Jerome — one capable of offering 52 channels. This will require favorable financing conditions, he said.

Mayor Ralph Peters said council would take the requests under advisement and give Ritnour an answer at its next meeting.

In other business at last week's meeting:

• Carl Taylor, a former deputy sheriff in the east end of Jerome County, was sworn in by the mayor as a new city police officer.

Also, at the request of police Chief Darryl Cameron, council approved the promotion of Officer Don Hughes to the rank of sergeant.

Cameron said that he does not plan to make any other promotions at this time, adding that Hughes will fill the position left vacant by Capt. Earl Flannery, who resigned to become the chief of police in Welser.

Cameron said that he does not plan to name a captain at the present time, but will have two sergeants instead. Lonny Meadows also holds the rank of sergeant.

• Lanny Sloan, the city's public-works director, reported that the city's new animal shelter should be ready for occupancy in about a week. City crews are now painting the interior, he said.

Car, yes; raise, no

County OKs sheriff's request for new car, but not pay hike

JEROME — Sheriff Elza Hall, who asked the Jerome County commissioners for a new car and a salary increase last week, will get the car — but not the raise.

The commissioners agreed Monday to allow the sheriff to take bids on a new police car, since there are funds in his budget to cover the item.

Commissioner Pam Smith said former commission Chairman Mel Grindstaff had advised that the car had been promised and budgeted for late last year.

The commission voted to grant the purchase of the car.

It also decided Monday to help the sheriff's office by establishing a $200 fund for emergency use and a $1,000 "revolving fund" from which the sheriff can withdraw funds at night, on weekends or on holidays, in the event an immediate trip to pick up a prisoner is necessary.

Hall told the commission last week that he presently has to pay for such costs out of his own pocket, then turn in a claim for reimbursement, which may come several weeks later.

The $1,000 fund will be available from the auditor's office, on demand from the sheriff, without having to wait for approval by the commission at its weekly meetings.

But the request for a pay increase was a different story.

"I don't think we want to start a round of pay increases at this time," said commission Chairman Carl Butler."

Hall had asked for the $65-a-month pay increase that was awarded elected officials last fall by the previous commission, but then was taken back when budget problems developed. And Monday, the present board agreed not to act on the matter.

St. Benedict's administrator says hospital can't discount its bills

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — There will be no discounts to Jerome County on the bills it receives from St. Benedict's Hospital for indigent patients, according to hospital administrator Robert Campbell.

But hospital officials are willing to try for a solution to the growing costs for the bills, Campbell said Monday.

Last month, the Jerome County commissioners asked Campbell if St. Benedict's would meet the county halfway on some of the indigent bills the commission is holding.

Campbell informed the commission Monday that his hospital could not consider such a loss. He said the county has the right to approve or deny the claims, and the hospital has the right, if the claims are denied, to pursue the matter in court.

But at the close of the discussion, Campbell said that he and his staff are available to help work out a system for handling the indigent claims, to avoid meetings and negotiations on each case.

Commission Chairman Carl Butler suggested a policy in which the indigent be held responsible for at least part of the bill, providing that person is able to work after recovering from his or her medical problem.

One claim for more than $8,000 was discussed. Campbell said the hospital will check the individual's property and other assets for possible attachment before asking the county to pay the cost.

The commissioners, with a $57,000 indigent fund for the year, already have received about $40,000 in bills from hospitals in Utah and Idaho for indigent Jerome County residents. Current state law requires counties — as a last resort — to pay for the medical bills of indigents.

"We would like to do honorably what we are required by law to do, but where an individual has property of value, they, too, have a responsibility to help pay their own bills," Butler said.

Many Jerome County indigents may find it more difficult to receive county assistance than in the past.

The commissioners have set up an investigative plan to check each request for assistance of all types, including medical bills, food, heat, rent and other expenses. The county clerk's office will work with the prosecutor's office to check all such requests.

In other action Monday, the commissioners appointed Kraig Dahl of Hazelton to the county planning and zoning board.

Through tax credits

Saving buildings can save money

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — A 1981 federal law that grants tax credits for the restoration of old buildings has done much to save historical structures in many Idaho communities, according to Don Watts, of the Idaho Historical Society.

The Economic Recovery Tax Law of 1981 makes it economically feasible to restore some of our older buildings that would otherwise be razed or allowed to deteriorate," Watts told Jerome Chamber of Commerce members Wednesday noon.

Three representatives of the Idaho Historical Society arrived in Jerome on Wednesday for a two-day visit and tour. Jennifer Attebery, the state's architectural historian; Watts, an urban planner for the society; and Fred Walters, an historical preservation technician who works with the society, were guests at the chamber meeting.

Watts said that prior to the implementation of tax law, many valuable and historic buildings, such as the Northside Inn in Jerome, were destroyed to make room for modern buildings.

"From 1976 until 1982, we processed only 12 applications for historic buildings restorations. From Jan. 1 of this year and up to the present date, we have handled 27 such applications," he said.

Watts explained the criteria for establishing a structure as an historic building and qualifying for tax credits for the money spent on renovation and restoration work.

He said the first step is to certify the building as historically important. This can be done by getting the building listed on the National Registry of Historic Places. The only Jerome structure currently on the registry is the Idaho First National Bank, he said.

Virginia Ricketts, of the Jerome County Historical Society, is working to have other buildings placed on the registry to help protect them from demolition crews.

Attebery said that she planned to tour other Jerome County buildings during her visit and make recommendations for registry listings. She said the old Jerome creamery building; a stone structure now used by EE-DA-HOW Specialties, is quite suited to restoration and preservation. And the Jerome Presbyterian Church, now under consideration for refurbishing, could well come under the tax-credit program, she said.

She explained that the society also is interested in old barns, especially those built with lava rock, and in hay derricks and windmills.

"Some of these things are not found outside of the states of Idaho and Utah," she said. "There are many beautiful examples of early architecture in the rock homes, barns and business buildings still standing in Jerome County," Attebery said.

School district's bid on building

not 'acceptable'

JEROME — The Jerome School District is still looking for a site for a future elementary school.

Superintendent Stephenson Youngerman said this week that the district did make an offer to buy the Jerome Implement Co. building, off South Lincoln Street, but it was unable to conclude the negotiations with the owners successfully.

The firm discontinued business last fall and had offered to sell the school district its building, which would have been remodeled into an elementary school.

Youngerman said that while the school board already has indicated that the district is not able to build another elementary school now, it has suggested that a site be located and held for such time as a building can be erected.

Elementary and junior-high classrooms in Jerome are crowded and the district was forced to drop kindergarten classes last fall. And two bond-issue elections, seeking money to finance the construction of new classrooms, failed last year.

Educators say public schools must have more funding to keep from deteriorating

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Urging public action, a school administrator, a parent, teacher representatives and a school board member all painted a grim picture of schools struggling to stay alive because of funding cuts, at a public hearing this week.

And they predicted an even deeper slide into a "deteriorated" school system across the state if the trend continues.

Held at the College of Southern Idaho, the Tuesday evening meeting was sponsored by the Idaho Education Coalition, which is composed of the Idaho Education Association, school administrators, school board members and parent-teachers associations.

Five coalition members re-enacted their January presentation to the Legislature's Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee, where they supported the state Department of Education's $257 million appropriation request for public schools for 1984.

The committee, however, "scoffed" at the requested $42 million increase over this year's $215 million appropriation, because of the depressed economy, said Don Rollie, the IEA executive director. The legislators, in effect, told them to get "the people to tell us" because "we heard all of that before" from educators, he said.

That was the "catalyst" for the Twin Falls meeting and others that are planned in the next two weeks in Boise, Pocatello and Coeur D'Alene, he said.

As far as taking action, IEA President Daryl Sallaz of Boise urged those present to spread the word, contact legislators and oppose the Republican plan to balance this year's state budget.

The bill, which since the meeting has been passed by both the House and Senate, and has been sent to the governor, provides for a temporary one-cent sales-tax increase. But at the price of a $7.5 million cut to public education, Sallaz said.

Worse, Sallaz said, it could set the "tone" for 1984. He said he favors a long-range measure to give education what it deserves — more funds.

It is imperative to get the word out to stop the GOP plan, Sallaz told the 60 people present.

"It's like dropping petals in a pool and watching the ripples, you people are the ripples," Rollie said. He added that drastic measures, like cutting popular athetic programs, may be needed to get the public's attention.

Mostly, the panelists spoke of hard times in school districts and an insensitive Legislature.

A former Idaho PTA president, Roberta Fields of New Meadows, said her own Meadows Valley School District has cut staff positions, kindergarten and other programs.

"We can't stand any more cuts," Fields said. "We are struggling to meet minimum standards."

The programs they hoped to begin in the district, like home economics, choir, drama and others, will never be realized in the present school-funding climate, she said. And, in a survey of eight other districts, she said she found similar complaints.

In a state noted for its booming population, Idaho was ranked in the low 40s in teacher salaries and the amount of funds spent per child, Rollie said. There is a 19 percent difference between what teachers in Idaho are paid and the average wage in six bordering states.

"We're not terribly proud" of the rankings, though a number of legislators are apparently not impressed, Rollie said.

One of the reasons for the financial bind is the state's poor taxing structures, said the educators.

The state has allowed $60 million in tax relief in the past 10 years, resulting in lost revenue, Rollie said. And the lost funds have been made up from the state's general fund, he said.

"The Legislature may refuse to admit it but it's true," Rollie said.

Then, came the One Percent Initiative that froze local property-tax levels, which adversely affected education, he said. Add to that reduced federal funding and education is like "a piece of meat in a sandwich," Rollie claimed.

Meridian schools Superintendent Gus Hein, the president elect of the Idaho Association of School Administrators, said the budget-setting committee's duty was to cut up the general-fund pie and listen to all the needs of the state agencies. However, the "pie needs to be larger," Hein said, otherwise the schools will continue to approach a "crippling" condition.

And Meridian businessman Gary West, the Idaho School Board Association president, claimed that the Legislature's neglect of additional funding of schools, especially vocational programs, is affecting the state's future. That is, there are no funds to properly guide students in career goals or "invest in those individuals preparing for the future."

In 1981, more than 3,000 students were turned away from enrollment in the state's six vocational-education schools, West said. Student demand increased, but the programs could not expand due to lack of money, he said.

Less than a handful of those in attendance Tuesday night were not teachers, school board members or other school officials.

After the meeting, Filer school board member Al Ochsner said nothing was presented that his board didn't know already, but the public has to be alerted.

Council defeats chamber fee hike

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls City Council has defeated two motions to increase the amount the city pays as a member of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce.

Meeting Monday night, it was the only controversial matter on council's agenda.

Although Councilman John Peterson said he believed any fee was "an inappropriate use" of city money, the dispute largely centered on the amount the city should pay.

The chamber has increased its fees recently, Councilman Emery Petersen reported. At the new business rate — $120, plus $2 per employee — he said the city could pay as much as $488.

But the defeated motions would have set the fee at substantially less — $250 and $160. The city currently pays $60, as a non-profit organization.

In other business, council agreed to offer a 10-year lease to Shewmaker Brothers for land at the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport.

The annual base fee will be $1,633, a rate of 8 cents per square foot. Shewmaker Brothers plan to build a general aviation hangar for personal aircraft on the site.

In discussing the application, council directed the city staff to review airport leases to ensure that, on termination, they require lessees to remove all improvements to city land.

The council also:

• Officially appointed Fritz Wonderlich as the new city attorney, to replace the departing Susan Swanberg. Wonderlich's starting salary will be $27,500, plus benefits, with a four-month probationary review.

• Appropriated $24,600 in federal revenue-sharing money to purchase new pothole-repair equipment. However, only $23,000 had been budgeted for the purchase. But council authorized the expenditure of an additional $1,600 from a contingency fund. Only one acceptable bid was received.

• Agreed to allow the Yellowstone Co. to maintain its sign at 219 Fifth Ave. E., if it were moved back flush with the building.

Yellowstone's free-standing sign, located in a residential zone, had been in violation of city ordinances.

Zoning board delays pesticide-issue action

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It will be two weeks before the Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission will determine a course of action regarding a complaint by a group of Buena Vista-area residents who suspect their neighborhood has been contaminated by a nearby pesticide storage facility.

The commission voted Tuesday to table the matter until its next work session, when it will decide what action to take, and under what timetable it plans to proceed.

Residents of the area presented the commission with a plastic bag that they said contained several pieces of cardboard used as wrapping for dangerous pesticides. The wrappers had blown onto one of their lawns, they said.

They asked the commission to smell the pieces of cardboard, since they also claim the odor given off by them permeates their neighborhood.

The residents have complained that products stored at the Warberg Warehouse, at 199 Canyon St., have affected their health adversely. They have asked the city to halt the storage of toxic chemicals within the city limits.

But commission members pointed out they are powerless to change the present situation. The commission can only advise City Council to pass an ordinance prohibiting pesticide storage in commercially zoned areas, they said.

This would not force the present warehouse to close, since it would be protected under a "grandfather" right.

Carl Niedrich, speaking for the residents, said that any such action would be appreciated, however. It also would keep the present situation from occurring elsewhere in the city, he said.

In other business at Tuesday's meeting:

• The commission granted a special-use permit to the Arctic Circle restaurant, off Filer Avenue, to construct a drive-in window.

After a lengthy presentation by architect Richard Heindel, city engineer Gary Young noted that a drive-in window at the Arctic Circle would not be "an ideal situation."

But, he said, it would boil down to a management problem, and he said he was satisfied with the management proposals of the owner, Allan Howa.

These proposals included moving drivers and their cars forward to await service after they had ordered, and having an extra person stationed outside the building with a walkie-talkie to take orders during peak periods.

• The commission also granted a special-use permit to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, off Elizabeth Boulevard, to construct additional classroom space.

• And it granted Robert Stuart Junior High School the right to install a 32-square-foot free-standing sign on school property, off Caswell Avenue West.

However, the school has indicated it will appeal to City Council in order to install a 40-square-foot sign, which would be in excess of what is allowed under the present city zoning ordinances.

Rally drives Dow to second highest level

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks snapped a two-day slump with a rally Thursday that drove the Dow Jones industrial average to its second highest level.

The rally was spurred by investor hopes that interest rates would not rise and oil prices would stabilize.

High-technology issues that were battered recently were among the winners along with oil issues in the heavy volume rebound that saw both institutions and speculators bidding for stocks.

The Dow Jones average of 30 stocks, a 19.68-point loser the previous two sessions, climbed 20.33 to 1,087.75, the best finish since it reached an all-time high of 1,092.35 set Jan. 10.

It had been up to 1,090 late in the session. This marked the third time this week the Dow, which fell 7.91 Wednesday, has failed to top its record to move on to the 1,100 level.

The New York Stock Exchange index rose 1.31 to an all-time high of 85.10 and the price of an average share increased 53 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index jumped 2.59 to a record 147.50. Advances topped declines 1,167-454 among the 1,940 issues traded.

Big Board volume rose to 93,510,000 shares from 84,520,000 traded Wednesday, indicating some megabuck institutional investors were busy for the first time in weeks.

"Institutions have been waiting impatiently for prices to drop significantly and when that didn't happen they began buying," said Michael Metz, Oppenheimer & Co. vice president.

An early bond-price surge kicked off the stock market stampede because it indicated interest rates may not rise, bringing relief to investors who had feared a boost because of the huge federal budget deficit.

Trude Latimer, Evans & Co. vice president, said "a news report Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker has predicted continued lower interest rates reassured many investors."

The rally was bolstered by a host of reports and rumors that oil prices will not collapse as a result of OPEC's failure to reach a pricing and production agreement.

"A report that Iran was winning the war against Iraq and planned to hold the line on OPEC's $34-a-barrel oil price helped the rally," according to Miss Latimer. Another report said Nigeria had reached a production and price agreement, according to Warren Shinnerlick, Merrill Lynch oil analyst.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 109,281,670 shares, up from the 100,414,810 traded Wednesday.

The American Stock Exchange index rose 5.53 to 376.06 and the price of a share jumped 21 cents. Advances topped declines 437-175 among the 825 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 9,084,900 shares compared with 7,237,500 traded Wednesday.

The National Association of Securities Dealers NASDAQ index of OTC stocks gained 3.39 to an all-time high of 254.77.

On the trading floor, Exxon was the most active NYSE-listed issue, up ⅞ to 30 ¼. Mesa Offshore Trust followed, off ⅛ to 2 ¼.

Among other oils, Phillips Petroleum rose 1 ⅞ to 32 ½, Mobil 1 ⅜ to 28 ½, Atlantic Richfield 1 ⅛ to 46 ¾, California Standard 1 ⅝ to 35 ¼, Ohio Standard ¾ to 40 ¾, Indiana Standard 1 ½ to 43 ¼ and Getty 3 ⅛ to 56 ¾.

Owens-Corning-Fiberglas was the third most active issue, up 1 ⅜ to 38 following blocks of 846,400 at 36 ¾ and 187,500 shares at 36 ⅝.

Blue-chip American Express, which would be helped by lower interest rates and benefit from reduced fuel prices, climbed 2 ⅝ to 66 ¼.

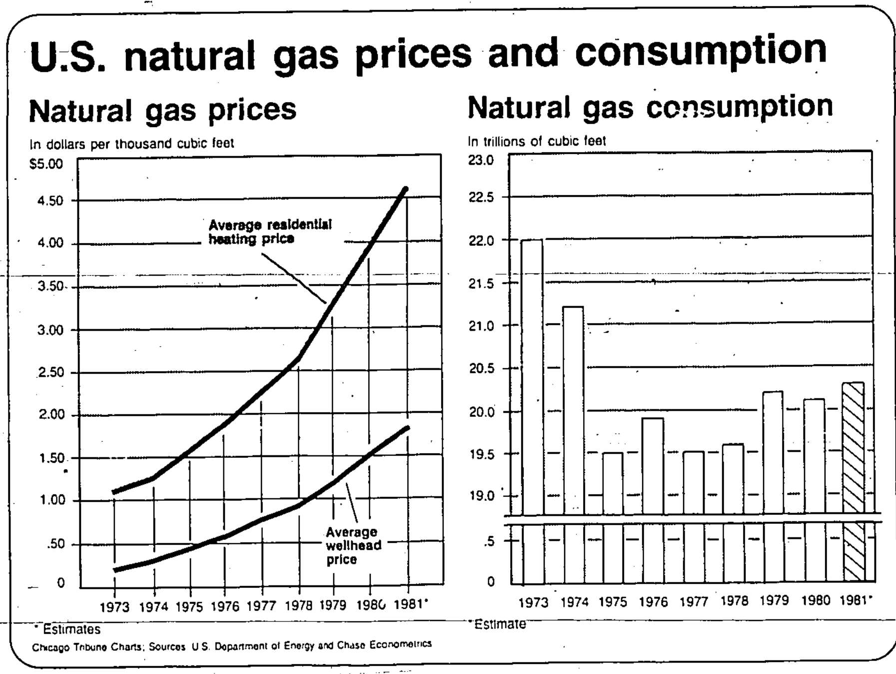
Among the high-technology issues, Digital Equipment gained 3 ⅜ to 120 ¼, General Electric 1 ⅛ to 103 ⅝, Hewlett-Packard 2 ⅝ to 83 ⅝, Honeywell 2 ⅜ to 91, IBM 1 ⅞ to 96 ⅜, Motorola 3 to 110, NCR 2 ⅜ to 97 ½ and Texas Instruments 1 ⅞ to 163 ⅞.

Mesta Machine, which did not trade Wednesday, plunged 3 to 4 ⅝. The company has filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the bankruptcy code after its Pittsburgh bank lenders took court action to recover $20 million in debt.

Mission Insurance climbed 2 ½ to 32 ¾ amid speculation the company was a takeover target. The company said it could not explain the rise in its stock.

Aetna Life & Casualty added 1 ⅛ to 34 ½. The company said it plans a major financial restructuring program to counter a Securities and Exchange Commission accounting ruling that would sap the big insurer's earnings.

Mary Kay Cosmetics, which voted a 2-for-1 stock split, gained 1 ¼ to 60.



Congress may fix crop swap tax status after delay

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress is almost certain to approve legislation clarifying the tax status of farmers joining in the government's new crop reduction effort, but probably not before the sign-up deadline, a House leader said Thursday.

Scheduling problems probably will delay House consideration of the matter until after members have considered proposals to restructure the Social Security system, assistant House Democratic leader Thomas Foley of Washington said.

"I don't think we can expect the House to act (on the tax clarification) before March 11," Foley told an Agriculture Department journalists' conference, referring to the deadline for enrollment by farmers in the new payment-in-kind program.

The program, which is intended to reduce stockpiles of major crops and increase prices paid to farmers, offers a share of government surplus crops to farmers who leave large portions of their land idle this year.

Participating farmers may sell the crops or use them to feed their livestock.

"But it will become clear that the bill will be enacted," Foley said. "We want to give farmers a significant conviction that this will be taken care of."

The administration has joined Farm Belt lawmakers in urging changes in income tax laws that now would require farmers to pay taxes on whatever crops they receive from the government before, rather than after, they sell the commodities.

Agriculture Department officials have said they fear some farmers might be discouraged from signing up for the program if they are not guaranteed in advance that they will not be forced to pay taxes as soon as they receive the government crops.

Dawson Ahalt, acting deputy undersecretary of agriculture, said the sign-up deadline will not be extended, even if the tax question is not resolved by that time.

Ahalt and Assistant Secretary William Lesher said in a telephone news conference with farm reporters across the country they still hope the tax measure will be in place before the deadline.

"But we have assurances from people up there that even if the March 11 date is not met, it will happen shortly after that," Lesher said.

Natural gas decontrol talks approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, hoping to wed two often contradictory goals, has authorized talks with Congress on a plan that provides for decontrol of natural gas prices as well as consumer protection, aides said Thursday.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes, in a turnabout from the previous day, told reporters Energy Secretary Donald Hodel has presidential approval to discuss deregulation alternatives with members of Congress.

"The president has authorized Hodel to begin consultations with the Hill to have their input on ways to meet the problem created by the Natural Gas Policy Act," Speakes said.

On Wednesday, Speakes insisted Hodel had not received "marching orders" to consult with Congress on decontrol legislation.

Reagan took the action after a Tuesday meeting of the Cabinet Council on Natural Resources and the Environment, which urged him to press for legislation that would lift all controls on natural gas prices by 1985.

Reagan, a longtime crusader for the free market system, called for natural gas deregulation during his campaign for the White House, but has been deterred by political and economic considerations from sending a proposal to Capitol Hill.

The Energy Department reports natural gas prices have risen 25 percent in the last year. Prices in some cities have gone up as much as 60 percent and consumer groups insist the removal of federal controls would send prices even higher.

Edwin Harper, Reagan's top assistant for policy development, said Thursday the sticking point in sending a proposal to Congress is deciding how best to prevent the "surge in prices" feared from deregulation.

Harper told a group of reporters "there are ways" to balance the interests of producers and consumers, and these options are under study by the president and will be a focus of discussions between the administration and Congress.

"There's more than one way to protect consumers," he said.

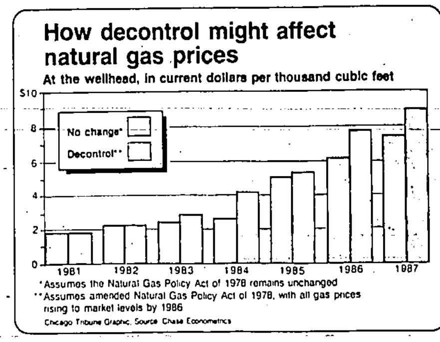
The Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 already provides for gradual deregulation that would remove price restraints on about 65 percent of gas supplies by 1985. Reagan has been presented with options ranging from immediate decontrol to phased decontrol that would be completed by Jan. 1, 1985.

However, administration officials stressed Reagan will insist on built-in safeguards for consumers.

One option is to let pipelines renegotiate contracts that now require them to purchase higher-priced gas. Harper said others include steps to dampen prices increases, a review of "automatic pass-through" clauses and special provisions to ease the impact on the elderly, poor and unemployed.

"There are different ways of tackling the problem," he said.

Harper said one of the administration's primary goals is "to get some uniformity" in natural gas prices. Under the current process, he said, one of the major problems "is that you've got so many different prices for different kinds of gas that it really distorts the process of exploration, production, transmission and so forth."



Retail sales increase only 0.1% in January

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sales by America's retailers grew only 0.1 percent in January while Christmas sales were even worse than originally measured, the Commerce Department said Thursday.

But some analysts and the administration said the weak improvement was still enough to show a "gradual" recovery of the economy, as measured by consumer purchases, got underway last month.

The department said the total sales of retail stores in January amounted to $91.5 billion after adjustment to show changes beyond routine seasonal buying patterns. While only 0.1 percent above December the figure was 7.3 percent ahead of the year earlier total in January, 1982.

December's sales actually dropped 1.2 percent, the department said, instead of slumping only 0.4 percent as originally measured.

Some leading analysts were encouraged that the January performance was not worse.

"Relative to where we've been for the last six or eight months this is heartening news," private economist Sandra Shaber of Chase Econometrics, Bala Cynwyd, Pa..

Looking beyond the overall number, which was heavily influenced by declines in the single category of automobile sales, the non-auto pace was considerably better, up 0.8 percent in January after a revised 0.1 percent increase in December.

"The best we were hoping for was a very gradual, a very modest recovery, particularly for the first half of this year," Mrs. Shaber said. "At least we're in that sort of recovery" even though the total number is "terribly small."

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige agreed a recovery was confirmed by the figures. "Consumer buying will be bolstered by further reductions in personal taxes and by improved confidence," he said. "Retailers should participate fully in the business recovery now underway. The sustained sales growth should induce retailers to boost ordering and employment."

Automobile sales in January, measured alone, were down 2.75 percent after dropping a revised 6.4 percent in December, the department said.

But auto sales had surged in November by a revised 12.8 percent, the largest increase in nearly 11 years, leading analysts to expect the subsequent deceleration.

Tips offered for taxpayers in 50% tax bracket

Universal Press Syndicate

Sixth in a series

If you are a higher income individual, you don't reach the 50 percent tax bracket until your taxable income for 1982 is over $85,600 if you're married, filing jointly; $41,500 if single.

For '81, the 50 percent rate was reached at $60,000 if married, the same $41,500 if single. Quite a tax break for the high-bracket individuals.

The tax-rate schedule for all of us is noticeably lower in '82 than in '81 — some 9 percent lower. And now, the 50 percent rate is your top bracket for all taxable income, whether earned income (such as salaries) or unearned income (such as interest, dividends, etc.). In 1983, under the present tax law, the 50 percent tax-rate level won't be reached until taxable income exceeds $109,400 if you're married and $55,300 if you're single.

With these figures, any debate over whether the tax law was changed to benefit the high-bracket individuals or not becomes meaningless.

On charitable contributions, there was a minor law change that may result in more confusion on your income tax forms than it's worth. Specifically, even if you don't itemize your deductions for '82, you may nevertheless qualify for a nominal charitable contribution deduction of up to $25.

Formerly, if you used the standard deduction (zero bracket amount), either on Form 1040 or by filing Form 1040A, you couldn't claim any itemized deduction. But the law was changed, starting in '82.

In addition to your standard deduction, in '82 you can now deduct for '82 25 percent of your charitable contributions up to $100, or a $25 maximum deduction.

Married persons filing joint returns can only deduct up to $25. If you file separately, the maximum for each of you is $12.50.

No details of your actual contributions are required to be furnished with your return for this special deduction.

It's a relatively small contribution allowance and it has further complicated all tax returns. The tax forms have had to provide an added line for this deduction — even though it applies only to those who use the standard deduction.

So if you suddenly come across this new line on your form, you will know what it is. If you deduct charitable contributions along with other itemized deductions, ignore this line. If you do not itemize deductions, take your up-to-$25 contribution deduction at this line.

Warning on penalties: To "encourage" you to file accurate returns, Congress has added a number of new penalties, of which you may be totally unaware.

Whether you innocently or not-so-innocently understate your correct tax and the Internal Revenue Service discovers and corrects your tax, you will not only have to pay the correct tax due but also pay interest at a very high rate on your underpayment. In the long-past era of 6 percent straight interest, the interest on a tax assessment was generally a minor consideration. But in 1982, the interest rate jumped to 20 percent. As of Jan. 1, 1983, the annual rate dropped to 16 percent until at least July 1, 1983, when it will be refigured.

While the rate is 16 percent, however, the law now requires daily compounding of the interest. Roughly, this raises the effective rate to about 17 1/2 percent. Since most returns aren't examined for a few years after filing, the daily compounding can add a horrendous amount to your deficiency.

For instance, say that two years after you filed your return, the IRS sends you a bill for $1,000 in underpaid taxes. If the current 16 percent compounded daily rate remains unchanged until then, your interest bill will be about $375. If you fight with the IRS for another two years before you agree to pay the $1,000 extra tax, the interest alone will run to $889 — almost as much as the tax itself.

Take care on understating your taxes.

NOTICE OF EMERGENCY RULE-MAKING AND NOTICE OF INTENDED REGULAR RULE-MAKING

In compliance with Sections 67-5203(b) and 67-5204(b)(2), Idaho Code, notice is hereby given that the Department of Health and Welfare, State of Idaho, has undertaken emergency procedures for rulemaking. The action, under Docket Number 0304-8209E, involves the amendment and renumbering of rules governing FOOD STAMPS, Title 2, Chapter 4, Rules and Regulations of the Department of Health and Welfare. The action has been taken under the authority granted in Section 56-203(a) and (g) and 39-106(1), Idaho Code, for the purposes of implementing the provisions of 7 CFR 271.1, 272.1, 273.1 and 273.11 under P.L. 97-35 and 97-98, effective January 1, 1983.

Emergency rule-making is necessary because failure to implement the January 1983 federally mandated policy changes would result in a denial or reduction of benefits to households with disabled parents, boarders who reside in households, or some striker households. Also, failure to implement could result in a loss of federal funds and subsequent loss of food stamps for eligible households residing in Idaho.

The rules, which were adopted by emergency procedures on the 29th day of December, 1982, and filed by the undersigned on the 29th day of December, 1982, were effective on the 1st day of January, 1983, and will expire at the end of one hundred twenty (120) days on the 30th day of April, 1983.

In addition, notice is also given, in compliance with Section 67-5203(a)(1), Idaho Code, that the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, Division of Welfare, has also initiated regular rule-making under Docket Number 0304-8209, prior to adoption of these emergency rules as permanent rules.

The following is a descriptive summary of the substance of the emergency and intended permanent action and of the principal issues involved:

3-4005-05- Boarder
Proposed for amendment to add "a group of individuals" to the definition of a boarder.

3-4005.20- Household Composition
Proposed for amendment to change the definition of a household to allow certain parents who are blind or disabled to apply for separate status when they reside with their natural, adopted, or step-children.

3-4005.23- Nonhousehold Members
Proposed for amendment to remove boarders from the definition of nonhousehold members.

3-4300.07- Households With Boarders
Proposed for amendment to renumber and add criteria for calculating income and deductions for self-employed boarder households.

3-4340- Boarders
Proposed for amendment to include policy to allow boarders to participate as members of households who provide board. (Boarders are not currently eligible to participate.)

3-4341- Strikers
Proposed for amendment to change the determination of eligibility for striker households to the day prior to the strike (date of application), if the household is otherwise eligible the day prior to the strike.

Within the time limits specified below, any person can review the proposed rules in the DHW Administrative Procedure Section or in any of regional administrative offices of the Department. Copies of the proposed rules will be made available upon written request specifying the docket number(s) cited above and at a rate of ten cents (10¢) per page. Checks must accompany the request and be made payable to the Department of Health and Welfare for the amount of $1.50.

Anyone can submit written comment regarding the proposed rules, and any individual of industry who may be affected by the proposed rules is encouraged to submit information concerning the anticipated economic impact of the proposed action. For assistance on technical questions concerning the proposed rules, contact Pennie Bjornstad, Department of Health and Welfare, Division of Welfare, (208) 334-4340, Boise, Idaho. All written comments and data concerning the proposed rules must be directed to the undersigned and must be postmarked or delivered on or before February 24, 1983.

Provisions for public hearings are waived, as allowed by Section 67-5203(a) (4), Idaho Code, since the Department has no discretion as to the substantive requirements of the proposed amendment which is designed solely to comply with the provisions of Public Law 97-253, 7 CFR 272.1 and 273.9 to reflect the changes to seasonal and actual utility costs.

LEGAL NOTICE

The Governor of the State of Idaho, as authorized by the Job Training Partnership Act of 1982, and upon receiving recommendations from the State Job Training Coordinating Council, designates the six planning areas served by the Panhandle Area Council, Clearwater Economic Development Association, Ida-Ore Regional Planning and Development Association, Region IV Development Association, the Southeast Idaho Council of Governments, and the East Central Idaho Planning and Development Association, as Service Delivery Areas for the operation of training programs which will begin on October 1, 1983, and continue thereafter as provided for under the Act.

Each of the Service Delivery Areas (SDAs) meet the three basic requirements for designation as specified in the Act (Section 101 (a) (1)):

(A) is comprised of the State or one or more units of general local government;

(B) will promote effective delivery of job training services and

(C) (i) is consistent with labor market areas or standard metropolitan statistical areas, but this clause shall not be construed to require designation of an entire labor market area; or

(II) is consistent with areas in which related services are provided under other State or Federal programs.

The Ida-Ore Regional Planning and Development Association is additionally qualified for automatic SDA designation, as provided for by the Act, (Section 101(a) (4) (A)), because the geographic area is comprised of contiguous units of general local government with an aggregate population of 200,000 or more.

In addition to designation of the geographic area served by the Ida-Ore Regional Planning and Development Association, the Governor has also exercised his option to designate the other five above-named Service Delivery Areas under the Act (Section 101(a) (4) (B)), because the organizational structure will:

1. enhance and promote effective local planning for delivery of job training to economically disadvantaged persons and other individuals facing serious barriers to employment.
2. offer opportunities at the local level for private sector representatives and other citizens to provide policy guidance, design training programs and oversee training activities provided under the Act.

In designating the six SDAs, the Governor also concurred with the State Council's assessment that anticipated JTPA funding limitations will place severe strains on the capacity of each SDA to develop and support management systems which will ensure adequate protections and limit the potential for fiscal liabilities which would impact negatively not only the State government, but also on cities and counties which comprise the membership of the aforementioned anticipated limitations, the Governor has offered liability protection to the Ida-Ore Regional Planning and Development Association through (1) designation of the Idaho State Department of Employment as SDA grant recipient/administrator, and (2) negotiation with the Department of Employment for financial support of major management systems at state level on an equitable basis. Further, the Governor has conditioned SDA designation of the geographic areas served by the other five above-named associations of local government upon their agreement, in concurrence with the local private industry council to be formed, to similar liability protections.

In accordance with Section 101 (b) and other Act, interested parties and organizations are invited to comment upon these designations. Comments should be sent to the following address by March 1, 1983.

NOTICE OF EMERGENCY RULE-MAKING AND NOTICE OF INTENDED REGULAR RULE-MAKING

In compliance with Sections 67-5203(b) and 67-5204(b) (2), Idaho Code, notice is hereby given that the Department of Health and Welfare, State of Idaho, has undertaken emergency procedures for rulemaking. The action, under Docket Number 0304-8210E, involves the adoption, amendment, and renumbering of rules governing FOOD STAMPS, Title 3, Chapter 4, Rules and Regulations of the Department of Health and Welfare. The action has been taken under the authority granted in Section 56-203(a) and (g) and 39-106(1), Idaho Code, for the purposes of implementing the provisions of 7 CFR 272.1 and 273.9 under P.L. 97-253, effective January 1, 1983.

Emergency rule-making is necessary because the failure to implement the January 1983 federally mandated policy changes will result in a loss of federal funds and subsequent loss of food stamps for eligible households residing in Idaho. These changes are mandated under the 1982 Food Stamp Amendments or Public Law 97-253 through Federal Register Amendment No. 230 published November 16, 1982.

The rules, which were adopted by emergency procedures on the 29th day of December, 1982, and filed by the undersigned on the 29th day of December, 1982, were effective on the 1st day of January, 1983, and will expire at the end of one hundred twenty (120) days on the 30th day of April, 1983.

In addition, notice is also given, in compliance with Section 67-5203(a)(1), Idaho Code, that the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, Division of Welfare, has also initiated regular rule-making under Docket Number 0304-8210, prior to adoption of these emergency rules as permanent rules.

The following is a descriptive summary of the substance of the emergency and intended permanent action and of the principal issues involved:

3-4113.07- Utility Expenses
Proposed for amendment to require that a household incur either a heating or cooling expense, not just a heating or electricity expense, to qualify for a seasonal standard deduction and that the cost must be verified.

3-4113.08- Proposed for renumbering and adoption to add the verification requirement that when multiple households live in the same residence, the seasonal or actual utility cost must be verified and divided equally among the households who reside together, whether or not each household participates in the program.

3-4113.09 Utility Expenses In Certain Public Housing Units
Proposed for renumbering and adoption to add the verification requirement that when a household resides in a public housing unit which has central utility meters and the household is charged only for excess heating or cooling costs, the household cannot claim a seasonal utility standard. The household can claim actual cost for the excess heating and cooling cost charge and/or the utilities which are paid separately.

3-4264.06- Standard Utility Allowances
Proposed for amendment to allow a seasonal standard utility cost for households which incur heating or cooling costs separate and apart from rent or mortgage payments. Actual expenses in lieu of seasonal standard, switching from actual to standard utility cost and vica versa in the same certification period, and shared utility expenses amended, added, and renumbered for clarity.

3-4303.05- Shared Utility Expenses
Proposed for renumbering and adding to determine deductions and to provide instructions for dividing or prorating shared utility expenses.

Within the time limits specified below, any person can review the proposed rules in the DHW Administrative Procedure Section or in any of regional administrative offices of the Department. Copies of the proposed rules will be made available upon written requests specifying the docket number(s) cited above and at a rate of ten cents (10¢) per page. Checks must accompany the request and be made payable to the Department of Health and Welfare for the amount of $1.20p.

Anyone can submit written comment regarding the proposed rules, and any individual or industry who may be affected by the proposed rules is encouraged to submit information concerning the anticipated economic impact of the proposed action. For assistance on technical questions concerning the proposed rules, contact Pennie Bjornstad, Department of Health and Welfare, Division of Welfare, (208) 334-4340, Boise, Idaho. All written comments and data concerning the proposed rules must be directed to the undersigned and must be postmarked or delivered on or before February 24, 1983.

Provisions for public hearings are waived, as allowed by Section 67-5203(a) (4), Idaho Code, since the Department has no discretion as to the substantive requirements of the proposed amendment which is designed solely to comply with the provisions of Public Law 97-253, 7 CFR 272.1 and 273.9 to reflect the changes to seasonal and actual utility costs.

NOTICE OF EMERGENCY RULE-MAKING AND NOTICE OF INTENDED REGULAR RULE-MAKING

In compliance with Sections 67-5203(b) and 67-5204(b) (2), Idaho Code, notice is hereby given that the Department of Health and Welfare, State of Idaho, has undertaken emergency procedures for rulemaking. The action, under Docket Number 0301-8212E, involves the adoption and amendment of rules governing Eligibility for Financial and Medical Assistance, Title 3, Chapter 1, Rules and Regulations of the Department of Health and Welfare. The action has been taken under the authority granted in Section 56-202(b) and 39-106(1), Idaho Code, for the purposes of implementing the provisions of 20 CFR, Part 416, Subpart L, and 45 CFR 233.20, effective January 1, 1983.

Emergency rule-making is necessary because failure to implement this provision will deny eligibility to otherwise eligible applicants for Aid to Families with Dependent Children in violation of the Social Security Act and Aid to the Aged, blind, and Disabled. Further, eligibility for the AABD program would become more restrictive than for the federal Supplemental Security Income program. This means that the state would need to extend the Medical Assistance program to all individuals above to "spend down" to the financial eligibility limits by using excess resources for medical care. therefore, establishing medical need. This effect is a requirement of the Social Security Act, Section 1902(f), imposed on states with eligibility requirements more restrictive than the federal Supplemental Security Income program. No state funds are available to extend the Medical Assistance program to the medically needy.

The rules, which were adopted by emergency procedures on the 29th day of December, 1982, and filed by the undersigned on the 29th day of December, 1982, were effective on the 1st day of January, 1983, and will expire at the end of one hundred twenty (120) days on the 30th day of April, 1983.

In addition, notice is also given, in compliance with Section 67-5203(a)(1), Idaho Code, that the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, Division of Welfare, has also initiated regular rule-making under Docket Number 0301-8212, prior to adoption of these emergency rules as permanent rules.

The following is a descriptive summary of the substance of the emergency and intended permanent action and of the principal issues involved:

The Department is proposing:

To specify when resources are considered available for AFDC and to provide a disposable limit on Individual with excess resources who are making a reasonable effort to sell and who have not concealed excess resources; and To specify that unsaleable real property can be excluded from resources for AABD.

Within the time limits specified below, any person can review the proposed rules in the DHW Administrative Procedure Section or in any of regional administrative offices of the Department. Copies of the proposed rules will be made available upon written request specifying the docket number(s) cited above.

Anyone can submit written comment regarding the proposed rules, and any individual or industry who may be affected by the proposed rules is encouraged to submit information concerning the anticipated economic impact of the proposed action. For assistance on technical questions concerning the proposed rules, contact Pennie Bjornstad, Department of Health and Welfare, (208) 334-4340, Boise, Idaho. All written comments and data concerning the proposed rules must be directed to the undersigned and must be postmarked or delivered on or before February 24, 1983.

Provisions for public hearings are waived, as allowed by Section 67-5203(a) (4), Idaho Code, since the Department has no discretion as to the substantive requirements of the proposed amendment which is designed solely to comply with the provisions of Public Law 416, Subpart L, and 45 CFR 233.20 to reflect availability of resources.

Vulnerable: Both. Dealer: South. The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	All pass

Opening lead: Heart deuce

Loving thy neighbor around the home may be a virtue; at the bridge table it is total foolishness. And foolish is he who counts his own nine winners without counting first what he gives the opponents.

East won the heart ace and returned the seven, South finessing to West's queen. West's heart nine cleared the suit and South won with his king.

South could count four quick spade winners, one heart and two top clubs. He needed two more to bring the total to nine. Playing his longest suit, South played his club king and ducked a low club to East's jack to establish the remaining clubs in dummy. East probably should have dropped the jack under the king but it made no difference. West's heart nine had told East where West's entry was and a diamond return beat the game by two. South hopping with his diamond king. South got his nine winners but not before the defense took five.

Instead of establishing dummy's long suit and allowing the defenders an entry in both minors, South should have finessed in diamonds. After winning his heart king, dummy is entered with the spade ace and the diamond 10 is finessed successfully. West wins and cashes his heart but that is all for the defense. Dummy is re-entered with the club ace to repeat the diamond finesse and South has his nine tricks while holding the opponents to only four.

Shoshone's Sandra Kidner, middle, and Dorothy Fitzgerald sandwich Grace's Robyn Lloyd in an effort to steal the ball

Shoshone, Declo go down by slim margins

Styles to clash in semifinals

By LARRY HOVEY

TWIN FALLS — It'll be set-it-up against run-and-shoot in the semifinals of the State Girls A-3 Basketball Tournament at the CSI gymnasium today.

At least if Thursday's first round is any indication.

Potlach showed a tendency to be deliberate and meticulous in knocking off Teton 48-36 while Grace went for the gusto in outlasting Shoshone 54-51 in perhaps the best game of the meet thus far. That leaves Potlatch and Grace matching wits at 5:45 p.m. today.

Meanwhile, Lapwai and Ririe will be squaring off in the other semifinal. Lapwai rose to every occasion to turn back Declo 33-31 while Ririe slipped past Nampa Christian 31-29 when a possible tying shot at the buzzer bounced away.

The consolation round will begin at 10:45 a.m. when Teton and Shoshone square off and Nampac Christian will play Declo at 2:15 p.m.

Today's consolation-bracket losers will go home with the winner advancing to the consolation finals Saturday morning. The semifinal winners play for the title at 8:30 p.m. Saturday after the Friday losers play for third at 3:30 p.m.

Potlatch 48, Teton 36

Consistent Molly Spence broke up an inconsistent game in the second half to lead Potlatch past the Teton Redskins.

Spence, who wound up with 26 points, mostly on short turn-around lefthanders, broke Potlatch away from a 25-25 halftime draw with the first four points of the third quarter and the Loggers were never headed again.

In a weird ebb and flow offensive first half, Potlatch, with Spence and Candy French doing most of the damage, jumped ahead 21-8 through the opening minutes of the second quarter. But then as Potlatch subsided, Teton's press appeared taking effect. With Val Christensen and Michelle Smith sparkling, Teton scored the next 13 points and pulled into a 21-21 tie.

But that marked the high point of Teton's offense. In the third quarter, the Redskins dropped to six points — just two in the final three and one-half minutes. Nursing a two-point lead, Potlatch got two points from Jeannie Thompson and four from Spence to break into a 37-31 quarter-rest lead.

Spence and Thompson expanded that to 41-31 with 6:02 left and Teton was unable to get closer than eight after that. The final margin also marked Potlatch's biggest lead.

Grace 54, Shoshone 51

In the district tourney Shoshone was able to win a few games because of its performance at the free throw line, but Thursday the Indians' accuracy at the line failed them in critical situations as Grace advance with a three-point win.

Liz Norman and Clarin Osborn both missed attempts that could have given the Indians the lead during the final 19 seconds of play and Grace was able to hold off Shoshone's rally effort.

"We lost it at the free throw line and from throwing the ball away under pressure," Shoshone Coach Ed Sandy said. "We were 13-of-28 at the line and we ran some helter-skelter stuff against their press instead of taking our time and doing what we know to do."

Shoshone built an early lead via the outside gunning of Lisa Logosz and held a 23-18 halftime lead.

When the two teams resumed action, Grace applied a 2-2-1 press and harvested immediate results, taking a 27-25 lead with three minutes gone in the third quarter.

Shoshone regained the lead at 29-27 as Osborn and Logosz hit fielders and the two teams stayed close with a 35-35 tie at the end of the quarter.

A four-point play with 7:10 left in the game gave Grace a 43-37 lead and seconds later Grace center Cherie Kimball hit a basket on the run for a 45-37 count.

Shoshone regrouped with a time out and Osborn got the Indians back into the game with a free throw, a two-pointer from the corner and another free throw. Grace led 45-41 with 5:21 to play.

Julie VanVleet put Grace's lead at six with a layup as the Grizzlies broke Shoshone's press. But Sandra Kidner scored for the Indians and Logosz added a 20-footer from the corner a minute later and Grace's lead was two, 47-45.

Dorothy Fitzgerald made a single free throw to cut the deficit to one and when she missed the second charity shot Osborn rebounded and scored for what proved to be the Indians' only lead of the quarter, 48-47.

Grace's Melanie Taggart then reaped the rewards of her teammates' ability to break Shoshone's press. The 5-5 senior hit consecutive layins for a 51-48 Grace lead.

Cordier falls in only upset at mat meet

State Wrestling Tourney

BOISE — The only surprise to befall a Magic Valley entrant at the 26th annual State Wrestling Tournament Thursday was an unpleasant one.

Kimberly's Tim Cordier, seeded No. 1 in the A-3's 155-pound division, shockingly lost to Teton's Dave Forbush 13-9 in the evening session. Otherwise, it was a mostly smooth day at the Boise State University Pavilion for local Fourth District teams, which sent 15 wrestlers to the championship semifinals.

The first consolation round, pitting Thursday's losers against each other, starts today at 11 a.m. The semifinal championships begin at 7:30 p.m.

The Minico Spartans stood fourth among all A-1 teams after the afternoon session, and there's no reason to believe they're in any worse shape after the evening's action (team scores had not yet been compiled when The Times-News went to press). All three Spartans who had been seeded reached the championship semis.

Minico's Robert Kunzler, the tourney's fourth seed at 105 pounds, opened by pinning Boise's Alan Gunde in 1:50 and followed that with an even quicker pin, victimizing Coeur d'Alene's Dan Markowski in 1:00.

Kunzler wasn't as fast as 167-pound teammate Tad Barrie, however. Barrie needed just 40 and 38 seconds, to pin Borah's Brent Owens and Idaho Falls' Dave Perry, respectively.

Heavyweight David Pena wrestled just once after a first-round bye, but that was enough to put him in the semis as he outmuscled Sandpoint's Chris Platt, 8-1.

All four Twin Falls wrestlers lost their opening matches. Gomer Beglan (98 pounds) and D.W. Lindsey (185) each endured evening defeats after first-round byes. In the afternoon, Capital's Kirk Reilly pinned Bruin 138-pounder Greg Buck in 3:03.

Twin Falls' Troy Philliger helped establish a new state record, but it wasn't the kind of milestone the Bruin 132-pounder would like to treasure.

Philliger got pinned by top-seeded Jeff Kloetzer of Meridian in just 20 seconds, eclipsing the previously fastest pin of 40 seconds, a mark held by three wrestlers.

Skyline's Russ Young later gave Philliger some company, pinning his second-round opponent, Meridian's Terry Kadel, also in 20 seconds.

A-2

Three members of Jerome's 15-wrestler delegation did the most to help the Tigers to their fourth-place standing after the first day: Dan Karr (112), Troy Wall (126) and Marty Jones (132), each making it to the semis.

Karr, the No. 3 seed, pinned American Falls' Charlie Turner in 3:45 before outlasting Wallace's Wayne Jackson, 2-1; Wall, the top seed, edged Kellogg's Charley Miller 4-3 after sitting out a first-round bye; and Jones topped Madison's Alan Williams 7-2 following a bye.

Wood River sent just three wrestlers to state, but two of them — third-seeded Rob Miller (155) and Don Davies (185) are in the semis after each winning twice. And both Buhl's Kevin Chapman (138) and Burley's Drew Hurst (185) advanced to the semis by conquering their evening-session foe following a bye in the first round.

Six unlucky wrestlers faced seeded performers in the first round. The results were predictable. Jerome's Keith Meadows (132), Ron Adams

Vandals use balance to edge MSU, 73-69

MOSCOW (UPI) — Brian Kellerman scored 19 points and Idaho had three other players in double figures as the Vandals nipped Montana State 73-69 in a Big Sky Conference contest Thursday night.

The Vandals, now 6-2 in conference and 17-4 overall, led throughout the game, but Montana State kept coming back finally closing the score to 68-63 on Craig Kilborn's third three-point shot of the game with 1:32 left.

The Bobcats then made the mistake of fouling Kellerman, the conference's second-leading free throw shooter. He sank them both and then forced two consecutive turnovers as the Vandals ran their lead to 73-64 with 29 seconds left. The Bobcats couldn't come back but closed to the final margin on Kilborn's fourth three-pointer.

The Vandals' win sets up a key conference game Saturday night against Montana, currently the leader at 6-1. The Vandals remain tied with Reno for second place, the Woldpack nipping Weber State 69-67 in double overtime Thursday.

Stan Arnold added 16 and Phil Hopson and Pete Prigge put in 14 apiece for the Vandals. Kelvin Smith and Hopson also had eight rebounds each as the Vandals held a 31-29 board advantage.

Chris Brazier led the Bobcats, 2-6 in conference and 9-12 overall, with 22 points and Kilborn had 20.

Hagerman, Oakley suffer defeats

Northern & western teams advance

By LARRY HOVEY
and MARV CLEMONS
Times-News writers

TWIN FALLS — It's north Idaho against western Idaho in today's semifinals of the A-4 Girls State Basketball Tournament at the CSI gymnasium.

Cambridge, partly north, too, will take on Kootenai while Kendrick goes against Greenleaf Friends Academy. The state champion will come from that quartet.

Meanwhile, consolation play will have Leadore taking on Hagerman with Melba meeting Oakley.

In Friday's action, Cambridge outlasted Leadore in a battle of individual scorers while Kootenai rallied after being down for three quarters to whip Hagerman. Kendrick raised some eyebrows by polishing off Melba and Greenleaf wound it up with a fast-breaking decision over Oakley.

Cambridge 52, Leadore 48

Cambridge, getting an early spark from sophomore Tammy Pascoe, fought off a late charge by Leadore for its 52-48 decision.

In a game of individual scoring duels, Pascoe (25) and junior teammate Kristin Richel (19) outscored the Leadore duo of Karen Peterson (20) and Cherie Murdock (17). It was Pascoe and Richel who came up with the clinching points after Leadore had rallied to cut an 11-point third-quarter deficit to one with two minutes left in the game.

Both Pascoe and Peterson showed good penetrating ability but the major difference was Pascoe scored on most of hers. Peterson, who used a side-stepping final motion to lose the defense, missed several close-in shots.

Pascoe started asserting herself in the second quarter, driving through the Leadore zone surprisingly easily for close-in shots. She hit a six-point spurt midway through the second period that opened up a six-point lead and teammate Kathy Higgins expanded that to 25-17 from the charity stripe.

Cambridge continued to inch away in the third quarter, three times thrusting in front by 11.

Leadore started exerting the fourth-quarter pressure when Kathie Lowe hit a free throw and Murdock tallied in the miss on the second attempt. Beth Waters then banged in a long shot to cut the margin to four before Richel gave Cambridge a little breathing room.

Murdock replied with three points and Peterson hit a free throw and a cripple off a steal to slice the lead to 47-46 with two minutes left. But 13 seconds later Richell hit two free throws and, after a spread wasted nearly a minute, Pasco went to the line for another charity. Murdock pulled Leadore back to within a bucket with 37 seconds to play but Richel then iced it with a turn-around jumper.

Kootenai 37, Hag'man 26

Sophomore Shelly Layton turned redhot just as Hagerman went stone cold and Kootenai ran off with a 37-26 decision over the Pirates.

The margin of victory came as a surprise as through the first three quarters of the low-scoring, turnover-filled game, Hagerman always held the lead.

But Layton's sudden shooting coupled with foul trouble to Hagerman's Kristin McFadden and later a stingy man-to-man defense, proved the difference.

McFadden appeared capable of beating the Warriors by herself in the early going, scoring 14 of Hagerman's first 18 points that led to an 18-7 lead. But McFadden picked up her second foul with just over four minutes gone in the quarter and went to the bench. She came back for nearly three minutes in the third period and sparked the Pirates to their biggest lead of the game — then went back to the bench with her third foul.

Minico blasted by Sandpoint

POCATELLO — Sandpoint quickly sealed Minico's fate in the A-1 Girls State Basketball Tourney Thursday afternoon, taking a 57-22 verdict in the second game.

The Spartans had their troubles according to Coach Carol Bradshaw.

"Let's just put it this way," she said. "Minico couldn't dribble, Minico couldn't pass, Minico couldn't shoot and four-of-20 at the free throw line is terrible. Most of those were the front end of one-and-ones."

Bradshaw said Sandpoint's trapping defense didn't provide all that much problem, but other miscues cost the Spartans from making a better showing.

"We dribbled through the trap, it wasn't that tough," she said. "It was after that that we turned the ball over with dumb mistakes."

The Bulldogs held a 14-2 lead at the end of one quarter, a 27-7 cushion at the half and a 43-9 margin after three quarters.

Sophomore center Tina O'Donnell led the Spartans with eight points; but six came in the last quarter when Minico scored 14 points against Sandpoint's reserves.

Forward Becky Jacobsen had 12 to lead Sandpoint.

Minico will face Capital in consolation-round play today.

Meridian 52, Poky 40

Tresa Spaulding scored 24 points to lead the Meridian Warriors to their 78th consecutive victory, a 52-40 win over Pocatello in the final A-1 first-round game.

Meridian opened a 14-0 lead early in the first quarter, holding Pocatello scoreless until nearly six minutes had elapsed.

Pocatello reduced the margin to 24-18 as the first half ended and closed to within four, 34-30, on a jump shot by Laurie Romasko with 3:20 to go in the third quarter.

But Meridian scored the game's next nine points to lead 43-32 at the end of the period, and cruised through the fourth quarter to the 12-point win.

Id. Falls 41, Capital 39

Karri Geddes scored nine points to lead a balanced Idaho Falls attack in defeating Capital 41-39 in the opening game.

Capital was led by Terri McKenna, who scored eight of her 14 points in the second half.

Idaho Falls held slim 17-16 halftime lead.

Capital had an opportunity to again cut the lead to one point when an Idaho Falls player received a technical foul with 14 seconds remaining in the game, but time expired with no further scoring.

Highland 37, CDA 33

Jill Koetter sank two free throws with 22 seconds remaining to seal the Highland Rams' 37-33 win over the Coeur d'Alene Vikings.

Highland had a seven-point advantage in the fourth quarter, but could not hold off Coeur d'Alene as the Vikings closed to 35-33 on a free throw by Sabrina Sintay with 40 seconds left.

Koetter, who led all scorers with 15 points, then made the winning free throws for the Rams before the clubs traded turnovers in the closing seconds.

Bonners Ferry uses foul line to defeat Buhl

POCATELLO — Bonners Ferry almost couldn't miss at the free throw line and as a result, took a 65-50 win over Buhl in the opening round of the A-2 Girls State Basketball Tournament Thursday night.

Bonners Ferry made 23 of 29 charity attempts while Buhl went to the line just six times and made four.

"They (Bonners Ferry) had 16 points from the line in the first half and that was the difference," Buhl Coach Janet Smutny said. "Everytime we got near them we were fouling them. We just couldn't get the fouling stopped."

Kris Karnes had 30 points, including 14 from the line, as Bonners Ferry dispated Buhl to the consolation round where the Indians will meet Weiser today.

Smutny was pleased with the Indians' play outside of the fouls.

"I'm not saying that we didn't foul, because most of them were there," she said. "It's just that we couldn't get any called on our end of the floor."

Buhl was whistled for 21 fouls to 10 for Bonners Ferry.

Down 38-22 at the half, Buhl trimmed the deficit to nine points before Bonners Ferry got back into the bonus situation and pulled away for good.

"We just decided to go to work and get on the boards," Smutny said.

Karnes hit all six free throws she attempted in the last quarter as Bonners Ferry stayed safely ahead. Karnes was able to penetrate Buhl's zone defense for several short jumpers.

Kari Easton led Buhl with 20 points while Michelle Bonar added 14.

Looking at today's Weiser game, Smutny is optimistic.

"It looks like we match up pretty well as far as size and we might be a little quicker," she said.

Preston 38, Moscow 34

Mary Jo Hendricks scored 18 points to lead Preston to a 38-34 upset victory over two-time defending state champion Moscow in A-2 play.

The Indians held Moscow's all-American Andrea Lloyd to only two points during the second half.

Diaan Cuttani and Deanne Casperman scored seven and six points, respectively, to back Hendricks' effort.

Lloyd led Moscow with 10 points, followed by Tara Gilkey, Theresa Becker and Ronda Purnell, all with six points.

P. Falls 68, Vallivue 35

Thresa Conrad scored 17 points and two other players scored in double figures as Post Falls defeated Vallivue 68-35 in A-2 competition.

The Trojans led 31-13 at the half, and increased the margin to 28 points by the end of the third period.

Leading the Falcons was Tina Lehman with nine points.

Madison 42, Weiser 30

Kathy Parkinson scored a game-high 14 points to lead Madison to a 42-30 victory over Weiser in the A-2 tournament.

Chris Calzacorta was top scorer for Weiser with 12 points.

With 51 seconds to play Osborn converted an inside jumper to put the Indians within one, 51-50.

Grace was guilty of a double dribble with 45 seconds left, giving the Indians an excellent chance to go ahead.

The Indians worked the ball inside to Osborn and she went up for the turnaround. Kimball, Grace's 5-11 center, blocked the shot but also nicked Osborn's arm. The senior went to the line with 19 seconds left for a pair. The first went off the right side of the rim and the second went off the left. Grace rebounded and Norman fouled Taggart with 15 seconds left.

Taggart missed the first of two, but made the second for a 52-50 score.

Logosz fired and missed from the corner with nine seconds to go. Norman then scrambled for the rebound and was fouled with five seconds left. Her first rimmed in, but the second missed and Grace's Lloyd hustled into the corner for the rebound.

Osborn had no choice but to foul her with one second to press. Then Lloyd made both to put Grace into today's semifinals opposite Potlatch.

Shoshone was 7-of-13 at the line in the final quarter while Grace made seven of nine.

The press was the element that got the Grizzlies back into the game and the benefits came as a surprise to Coach Ray Yamauchi.

"Shoshone's guards were so quick that we didn't think we could pressure them," he said. "But we had to come with it in the second half and we got lucky on it a few times. We also got some help off the bench. I was afraid some of the girls would be nervous, but they helped us out."

Ririe 31, Christian 29

Robin Moss helped Ririe's Bulldogs build a five-point lead with 1:38 to go and they weathered a last-second shot by Nampa Christian for a 31-29 victory.

Moss hit three points to give Ririe a 30-25 advantage — the largest of the game. But Michelle Skyles brought Nampa Christian back into reach with two field goals — the last with 1:09 remaining. Larenda Woods' free throw with five seconds left established the final count as Skykles' running one-hander from the top of the key bounced off the glass at the buzzer.

Skyles led all scorers with 14 points while Woods topped Ririe with 10.

After a fast-opening, scoring drooped badly. The pace died when Nampa Christian went into a complete stall for 4:48 in the third quarter while sitting on a precarious 14-13 lead. The teams traded field goals to close the half and the third quarter ended at 21-all.

Lapwai 33, Declo 31

Lapwai took its time and with timely scoring knocked host district champion Declo into the consolation bracket 33-31.

The Wildcats, getting balanced scoring and taking tall Lyn Darrington out of the offensive arsenal in the final three quarters, took the lead at 8-6 midway through the first quarter. They never were out of Declo's reach but the Hornets couldn't catch up.

Lapwai's biggest lead came at 18-9 early in the second period but most of the time it hovered between two and six points.

The big difference in the usual Declo showing was the way Lapwai handled the one-two scoring punch of Darrington and Holly Bortz, who went into the game with 17 and 11-point per game averages.

Darrington, the tallest on the court at six feet, picked up nine points in the first quarter to keep Declo from falling out of it early. But Lapwai limited her to three after that. Meanwhile, Bortz was held to four points.

But Coach Lynn Payne didn't feel the Lapwai defense should have had such great effect.

"We just shot atrocious," he said. "We were able to get it inside and get the shots we wanted most of the time but they wouldn't fall for us. It was one of our poorer shooting nights but I imagine there are about 16 other coaches who feel the same way in the state tonight."

Coach Clark Muscat tried her again as the second half started but the fourth violation came 64 seconds later. He then tried to husband his star for the closing minutes but, with Linda Sutton playing a tight man game inside and her teammates pushing Hagerman's perimeter well out, McFadden couldn't score again.

Kootenai Coach Karla Merrill admitted seeing McFadden's 14-point hot streak cooled by fouls in the first half didn't break her heart.

"We were pretty proud of our zone but it was obvious that she could roll inside and kill us there," Merrill said of the early moments. "But in the second half I thought we controlled the defensive end really well. Linda stayed with her (McFadden) well and the defense gave us the game."

"We just couldn't do anything on the offensive end," Merrill continued. "We decided to send Layton back in in the third quarter late because they were doubling (double-teaming) Linda. I guess when Layton went back in she decided to do something."

Do something was putting it mildly. She picked up 10 of her 17 points in the final eight minutes as the Warriors caught up at 23-23 on four straight Layton points and took the lead for keeps on a Sutton follow shot with 5:07 to play. Layton then padded that with two more field goals and Darla Hanks followed with four more points to blow it open.

The Pirates, who saw their scoring dwindle from the opening minutes on down, struggled through the first 6:36 of the final period before Audra Wagner could get them off 23. Hagerman scored just eight points in the second half.

Muscat credited Kootenai's defense for the victory, noting "the man didn't bother us much in the first half. The rotation picks worked fine. But then nothing worked in the second half."

Kendrick 57, Melba 47

Kendrick's twin sister duo of Jane and Jean Glenn took charge early and guided the Tigers to a relatively easy 10-point win over Melba.

The Tigers, second in last year's A-3 state tourney, were never in danger as the Glenn sisters dominated the inside play and Melba wasn't able to effectively break Kendrick's 2-3 zone defense.

Jane scored 28 points and Jean had 12 while teammate Lisa Vallem accounted for 13, mostly on fast break baskets after Jane or Jean cleared the defensive boards.

Greenleaf 48, Oakley 27

Greenleaf Academy parlayed rebounding domination and fast breaking into big points on the board as the Grizzlies rolled over the Oakley Hornets 48-27.

Although the game's scoring pace started slowly — Greenleaf was on top 5-2 after eight minutes — the Grizzlies got nothing but better as they romped into the easy victory. They pumped in 13 in the second quarter and then doubled their first half output with an 18-point third period.

Coach Orrin Hills said he felt it wasn't until the second period that the crowd saw the true Grizzlies.

"It wasn't our usual game at first but we finally got it going," Hills said. "We think we run the break pretty well."

Oakley would agree with that.

Although not the tallest team in the tournament, Greenleaf got the ball off the boards and out quickly on several occasions. The benefactors of the quickness usually were Shelley Wilhite or Karri McIntyre. McIntyre picked up 15 points and Wilhite added nine more. Chris Gross worked the inside for 11 more.

Oakley didn't have a lot to reply with after getting past sophomore Cherrilynn Severe. Severe pumped in 19 points but even then didn't have the kind of shooting night she's capable of.

(138) and Mark Goodenow (145) lost to third-, first- and second-seeded performers, respectively.

Burley's Marvin Lopez (98), Buhl's Blaine Frazier (112) and Rigby's Keith Hunt (155) all lost to the top seeds in their weight classes.

Spencer Tolman, Jerome's top 167-pounder and the fourth seed in his class, lost to Moscow's Mark Bechtel, 11-10.

A-3

Cordier had it tough from the beginning. After his first-round bye, the Kimberly senior was tied with Forbush 2-2 after one period in the evening session and trailed 7-5 following two periods. However, Cordier opened the final period by picking up two points on a reversal.

After Forbush went ahead 8-7 on an escape, Cordier scored two more on a takedown to carry a 9-8 edge into the match's final minute.

But Forbush received a penalty point when Cordier illegally pushed him. "That changed the complexion of the match," Kimberly Coach Pat Valliant said. "Tim had to put him (Forbush) on his back at that point, and he hadn't done it all night."

Apparently energized, Forbush made the best of the little time remaining, dispatching Cordier with a reversal and near-fall.

"He wrestled the best and smartest match anybody could against Tim," Valliant said, praising Forbush.

On the brighter side, Gooding's Dale Tulley (112), Declo's Todd Webb (132), Valley's Curt Ulrich (155), Kimberly's Scott Osborne (185) and Filer's Farron Moore (heavyweight) each won two matches to secure semifinal berths.

Moore's opening-round pin of Malad's Scott Treasure was about as strenuous as a sneeze, coming as it did in 27 seconds, seven off the record set by Declo's Mike Matthews in 1979.

Filer Coach Bob McGrew felt fear played a big part in Moore's easy conquest.

"I told him that first-round kid would probably be scared of him, since Farron is the No. 1 seed," McGrew reasoned.

However, two seeded local wrestlers lost their first-round matches. Filer's David Backes, the No. 2 seed at 126 pounds, fell to North Fremont's Monty Calonge 9-7, while Gooding's Doug Fisk, ranked fourth at 167 pounds, got pinned by Sugar-Salem's Travis Davies in 3:25.

O'Leary sweeps Stuart

TWIN FALLS — Led by Kip Kytle's game-high 23 points, the O'Leary Cubs defeated the Robert Stuart Bears 51-50 Thursday night in ninth grade boys basketball.

O'Leary started slowly, scoring just three points in the first quarter as the Bears poured in 16. The Stuart lead was cut to 29-22 by halftime as O'Leary's Jamie Carlton sparked the Cubs to a 19-point quarter.

Outscoring the Bears 21-8 in the third period, O'Leary took a 43-37 lead and managed to hang on for the win despite being outscored 13-8 in the final quarter.

Todd Smith led all Stuart scorers with 22 points.

Ferraro's kidney malignant

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — A tumorous left kidney removed from Cleveland Indians' Manager Mike Ferraro was diagnosed as malignant Thursday but doctors said they thought they got all of the cancer and expected the 38-year-old skipper to make a complete recovery.

Ferraro was reported in fair condition following three hours of surgery performed Wednesday at Holy Cross Hospital.

Indians' president Gabe Paul said the team had been informed that the tumor was malignant.

"They think they got it all," Paul said from his Cleveland office. "They're very happy with the operation and expect him to be back in action soon. He's very fortunate that they got it as early as they did."

Stieb signs with Toronto

TORONTO (UPI) — Dave Stieb, the foundation of one of the most formidable pitching staffs in the American League, has signed a six-year, multi-million dollar contract with the Toronto Blue Jays, the club announced Thursday.

Stieb, 25, was reportedly asking $750,000 a year and the club was offering $500,000. Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

"I was ready to make a commitment and felt this was the best time in my career to do it," Stieb said from his home in Morgan Hills, Calif.

"The offer from the Blue Jays was outstanding. I appreciate the security that they have given me and my family."

The Blue Jays' young and ever-improving pitching staff was part of a team with the worst record in the American League Eastern Division in 1982.

Weber holds PBA lead

MIAMI (UPI) — Pete Weber averaged 216 for six games Thursday to take a 30-pin lead over Wayne Webb after the third round of the $110,000 Greater Sunshine Open.

Weber, 20, son of PBA Hall of Famer Dick Weber, finished with a 278 game to move into the lead. His 1,297 round gave him a 4,042 total for 18 games, a 225 average.

Webb, a 10-time champion who jumped from 113th to ninth place Wednesday, finished his 1,385 round with games of 279, 255 and 259 to total 4,012.

Salazar, de Castella meet

NEW YORK (UPI) — Alberto Salazar and Australian Robert de Castella, the world's best marathon runners, compete Saturday night in the U.S. Olympic Invitational track meet, an event that may be their final confrontation before the 1984 Olympic Games.

The two distance runners answer the starting gun at the Meadowlands in East Rutherford, N.J., in a 5,000 meter race which easily could be the feature offering of the evening.

Salazar holds the world's record for the 26-mile marathon of 2 hours, 8 minutes and 13 minutes set in New York City in October, 1981. Six weeks later, de Castella almost topped that mark with a 2:08.18 in Japan.

Higueras defeats Gerulaitis

TORONTO (UPI) — Jose Higueras, ranked No. 11, handed sixth-ranked Vitas Gerulaitis his second straight loss at the $250,000 Tennis Challenge Thursday night, chipping away at the New Yorker's confidence to post a 6-3, 6-4 victory.

Defending U.S. Open and 1982 Wimbledon champion Jimmy Connors met fellow American Tim Mayotte in the nightcap.

The 28-year-old Gerulaitis, who suffered an embarrassing 6-1, 6-0 opening-round loss to Connors Tuesday, blamed "a couple of sloppy points" for the loss.

Horse ransom demanded

DUBLIN, Ireland (UPI) — Police Thursday said a ransom demand for $3.1 million had been made for the kidnapped multimillion-dollar stallion Shergar and three journalists asked to negotiate took off from Belfast in a high-powered car.

Chief Superintendent James Murphy said the ransom demand had been made Wednesday night, about 24 hours after an armed gang held up a groom and his family at a stud farm near Newbridge, Ireland, and stole the 1981 English Derby winner.

Leonard, Giants agree

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The San Francisco Giants announced Thursday they have reached agreement on a contract with outfielder Jeff Leonard, hours before he was to appear before an arbitrator in Los Angeles.

Leonard, who batted .259 with nine homers and 49 RBI in only 278 at-bats last year, had been seeking a $225,000 per-year contract while the Giants reportedly were offering him $150,000 over two years.

Late birdie string gives Aoki 66, Hawaiian lead

HONOLULU (UPI) — Isao Aoki, the most consistent player from Japan on the PGA Tour, birdied seven of the final 10 holes at the Wailalae Country Club course Thursday for a 6-under-par 66 and a share of the first round lead with Dan Pohl and Vance Heafner in the $325,000 Hawaiian Open.

Aoki, who pocketed winnings in 10 of the 15 Tour events he entered last year, made the turn at even par by dropping in a 9-foot birdie putt at the ninth hole.

He then reeled off four consecutive birdies — from 12, 30, 18 and 12 feet — and capped the round with back-to-back birdies on the 16th and 17th.

"Going into the back nine, I decided to relax," said Aoki, the winner of 39 tournaments in his home land.

Heafner and Pohl reached their 66s via different routes.

Heafner started on the back nine, where he turned in a 32. At the 12th, he flew the green and went up against a fence which entitled him to a drop.

"I pitched to within six feet and saved par," he said. "That was a critical hole."

As for Pohl, he was three under going into the final two holes when he made his move. Using a 5-iron, he carded a hole-in-one at the 191-yard 17th and then rolled in a 12-foot birdie putt on the final hole.

The leaders were early starters at the par 72, 6,881-yard oceanside layout and their scores reflected the ideal playing conditions. Those teeing off in the afternoon ran into stiff trade winds.

Among those getting off late was this year's leading money-winner, Gil Morgan. He posted a one-over 73 and was in danger of missing the cut.

Tournament record-holder Hale Irwin, who shot a 23-under two years ago, also was on precarious ground with the same score.

Washam paces suspended round at Sarasota Open

SARASOTA, Fla. (UPI) — Jo Ann Washam battled rain, wind and darkness Thursday for a 5-under-par 67 to take the lead among those who were able to finish the first round of the $175,000 Sarasota Classic.

Washam finished her round eight minutes after LPGA officials suspended play because of darkness. She had just hit her second shot on the final hole when the horn sounded. Players had the option of finishing the hole they were on and Washam did so.

Sixty-nine players completed the round. The 63 caught on the course when play was suspended marked their balls and will resume the round this morning. The second round will begin after they finish.

Washam's 67 was three shots ahead of Alice Miller, who completed her round. Defending champion Beth Daniel was also five under with five holes still to play Friday.

Three players finished play at one-under-par 71 — Alice Ritzman, Donna White and Chris Johnson.

Play was suspended for 2 hours and 52 minutes during the early afternoon as steady rain and strong winds raked the course and occasional lightning knifed across the sky.

Walton to lead Jets, expects easy change

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — Joe Walton expects his transition period as New York Jets' head coach to go smoothly and without major changes.

Walton, who was named to succeed Walt Michaels Thursday, promised status quo after his promotion from offensive coordinator. After all, the Jets have been a playoff team for the past two years and Walton sees no reason to mess with a good nucleus.

"We believe we have a team capable of going to the Super Bowl and we want to continue in that direction," said Walton, 47, who took over one day after the Jets unexpectedly announced Michaels' resignation. "We have a good football team; there's no reason we can't be contenders every year. I don't anticipate changing or that anything will be different."

The Jets also announced that defensive coordinator Joe Gardi has been promoted to the position of assistant head coach. Since Walton joined the team and Gardi was promoted from linebackers and special teams coach to defensive coordinator two years ago, the Jets have gone from a .500 team to one of the American Conference's best.

Over the past two years, Walton has had complete control of the offense, while Gardi handled the defense. Walton said that system will remain intact.

"Joe (Gardi) and I have basically the same philosophy," Walton said. "I don't foresee any changes in our relationship. We'll continue to work closely."

Walton said he would hire another offensive assistant but he would continue as offensive coordinator. He will also continue to call the plays for quarterback Richard Todd, who has improved immensely under Walton's guidance.

Following the Jets' 14-0 loss to Miami in the AFC title game, Walton had interviewed for, but was passed over, coaching jobs in Kansas City and Atlanta. He also had talked with the Los Angeles Rams about their vacant head coaching job.

11 named to College Football Hall of Fame

Simpson, Cannon among Hall choices

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former Heisman Trophy winners O.J. Simpson of the University of Southern California and Billy Cannon of Louisiana State were among a list of 11 players named Thursday to the National Football Foundation's College Football Hall of Fame.

Joining Simpson and Cannon on the list of new electees are Illinois center-linebacker Dick Butkus, Notre Dame guard Bill "Moose" Fischer, Alabama center-linebacker Lee Roy Jordan, Texas A&M tackle Charles Krueger, Syracuse halfback Floyd Little, Texas guard Lewis "Bud" McFadin, Harvard halfback George Owen Jr., Maryland quarterback Jack Scarbath and UCLA guard Al Sparlis.

The electees will be formally inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame on Dec. 6, 1983, at the Foundation's annual dinner in New York.

Simpson, a two-time All-America at USC in 1967-68, combined 9.4 speed with power and led the nation in rushing his junior year when he finished second in the Heisman Trophy. He won the Heisman and Maxwell Trophies his senior year, then went on to an outstanding career in professional football with the Buffalo Bills. Since his retirement from pro football he has enjoyed a successful career as an actor and commentator in the television and motion picture industry.

Cannon, who played at LSU from 1957-59 and twice gained All-America status, was one of the top breakaway backs in the nation and led the Tigers to a national championship in 1958. He also won both the Heisman and Maxwell Trophies in his senior season and went on to a successful pro football career as a tight end with the Oakland Raiders. He is now a successful dentist in Baton Rouge, La.

Butkus, a 6-foot-3, 237-pounder, played center and linebacker for Illinois from 1962-64 and set all-time Illini single game, single season and career tackle records. He was named to the All-America team in 1963 and 1964 and starred in Illinois' Rose Bowl victory over Washington in his senior year. Butkus went on to an outstanding career in professional football with the Chicago Bears and is a member of the National Football League's Hall of Fame. He is currently an actor-commentator for Nautilus Sports Medical Industries.

Fischer played for Notre Dame from 1945-48 and won All-America honors during his final two seasons. He also won the Outland Trophy as the nation's best interior lineman in 1948. During his career at Notre Dame, the Fighting Irish went undefeated three times. Fischer played five seasons with the Chicago Cardinals of the NFL and also served as line coach at Notre Dame under Terry Brennan. He now owns an automobile agency in Ishpeming, Mich.

Jordan, who played for the late Paul "Bear" Bryant at Alabama from 1960-62, made All-America his senior year and was hailed by his coach "as one of the finest football players the world has ever seen. He was a 100 percent performer in practice and a 110 percent performer in games." Jordan also enjoyed all-pro success as a linebacker with the Dallas Cowboys. He is now a successful businessman in Dallas.

Krueger played at Texas A&M from 1955-57 and captained the Aggies in his senior year. An Academic All-America during his collegiate days, he later played 16 seasons for the San Francisco 49ers of the NFL. He now owns a retail store in Clayton, Calif.

Little was one of the nation's most exciting runners during his three seasons (1964-66) at Syracuse. He was named to the All-America team in his senior year and went on to a standout pro football career with the Denver Broncos. He now owns an automobile dealership in Santa Barbara, Calif.

McFadin, who played at Texas from 1948-50, is regarded as one of the Longhorns' all-time great linemen. Named to the All-America team in his senior season, McFadin also named the Most Valuable Player in the College All-Star Game in 1951; He later played pro football for the Los Angeles Rams, Houston Oilers and Denver Broncos. He is now a rancher in Del Rio, Texas.

Owen, the pioneer of the group of electees, was a three-sport star at Harvard from 1920-22. A 60-minute player in the old-fashioned tradition, Owen was outstanding on both offense and defense. He also captained the baseball and hockey teams. When Owen was set for graduation, Yale sent the following telegram: "Please be sure Owen graduates today and gets his degree." Owen is now retired after many years as an investment broker.

Scarbath starred at Maryland from 1950-52 and was runnerup to Oklahoma's Billy Vessels in the voting for the Heisman Trophy in his senior year. He led the Terrapins to 22 consecutive victories.

Sibson to test Hagler

WORCESTER, Mass. (UPI) — Marvin Hagler, unbeaten in his last 30 fights, puts his world middleweight title on the line for the sixth time tonight, taking on top-ranked Tony Sibson of England.

The fight, scheduled for 15 rounds before a sellout crowd of 13,577 at the new Centrum Arena, will be televised on cable by Home Box Office (HBO) starting at about 8:30 p.m. MST.

With the retirement of world welterweight champion Sugar Ray Leonard last November, Hagler now is the only champion recognized by both the World Boxing Council and the World Boxing Association. The recognition also carries with it the obligation to make mandatory defenses against the No. 1 ranked contenders from each organization.

"I stay pretty busy making mandatory defenses," Hagler said. "I go back and forth to the bank a lot. I'm not crazy about some of the guys they put in front of me as leading contenders but I'm the champion and I'll fight them."

"Tony Sibson hasn't had a shot yet, so I'm giving him his chance. After that, it'll be Frank 'the Animal' Fletcher and after I take care of him, I'll just keep taking out whoever they put in front of me."

Hagler, 28, from Brockton, Mass., is 55-2-2 with 46 knockouts. He has not lost since dropping a 10-round decision to Willie "the Worm" Monroe in March, 1976.

Sibson, a 24-year-old native of Leicester, England, is 47-3-1 with 27 knockouts.

Ramsey inks with USFL's L.A. Express

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Quarterback Tom Ramsey, the NCAA's top-rated passer with Rose Bowl champion UCLA last season, has signed with the Los Angeles Express of the United States Football League, club officials announced Wednesday.

Financial terms of the four-year agreement were not disclosed.

Ramsey, 21, led the Bruins to a 10-1-1 record and a No. 5 ranking in last season's NCAA ratings as he completed 336 passes for 2,986 yards and 21 touchdowns, with a .622 completion percentage.

He was named Pacific-10 Co-Player of the Year with Stanford's John Elway, finished seventh in the Heisman Trophy voting and was a second team All-America. He was also a starting quarterback in both the Hula Bowl and Senior Bowl postseason games.

Ramsey was considered a solid shot to win a position on an NFL team, but the Express reportedly all but guaranteed him the starting job. The club's backup quarterback apparently will be Mike Rae, an NFL veteran out of the University of Southern California.

The Express, which will play in the 92,000-seat Coliseum, is relying heavily on players from local schools to draw fans in the club's initial season.

Besides Rae, the club's roster includes such former USC standouts at Anthony Davis, Rich Dimler, Frank Jordan, David Pryor, Glen Walker and Kevin Williams.

Ramsey is the third major draft choice to sign with the USFL this week. Offensive lineman Irv Eatman, also of UCLA, and running back Kelvin Bryant of North Carolina signed multi-year contracts with the Philadelphia Stars.

Barton fills the mold of a creative jeweler

By WILLETTA WARBERG
Times-News arts critic

TWIN FALLS — Inside most creative persons, there are many artists trying to get out.

Bruce Barton of Twin Falls is one of these persons, able to do more creative things than he probably realizes.

With his father already in the jewelry business and relying on him to clean clocks when he was 9 years old, Barton had an obvious career path as a jeweler, rather than as a tinker, tailor, cowboy or sailor.

Barton is the youngest of four children. When he was young, he was the only one to show any interest whatsoever in the jewelry shop. Not taking any chances, Barton's father gave him a watch to overhaul when he was 10.

"I wasn't quite sure during my early years whether or not I wanted to follow in my father's footsteps, because all I seemed to do in the shop was sweep floors and generally keep things clean," he says, as he holds out a roughly made, beat-up peace-symbol medallion. "That was so until I made this first piece of jewelry when I was in junior high school. I was hooked."

Since his first piece of jewelry designing, casting and finishing, Barton has designed from scratch everything one could ever imagine closely related to jewelry. He rarely uses cataloged molds.

And he's designed for people throughout the Magic Valley, including Jim Messersmith, Helen Carter and casino owners Bob and Jane Barton, to whom he is not related.

This slender 29-year-old, second-generation Idahoan has dark hair and dark eyes and an easy-going nature. But he is more than a gentle jeweler.

Recently, Clarence Dudley, a Twin Falls photographer and collector of miniature antique trains and cars, gave Barton a tiny 1967 Lindberg model Jaguar. Barton cast a mold of the car and has since documented the Jaguar in silver body and gold bumpers. The rear-view mirror isn't much bigger than the head of a pin.

"I figure in materials and time, that it's worth about $2,500. That's almost as much as some of the old life-sized cars I restore," he says.

Barton rents a warehouse in which he has presently, under renovation, a 1967 Jaguar XKE, a 1957 Chevrolet, a 1965 Buick Electra convertible, a 1962 Impala and a Custom 8 Packard. Also in the shed is a restored boat, which he uses to water ski on Redfish Lake.

"Why did I make the silver and gold miniature Jaguar? Because it gave me something different to do while sitting in the jewelry store this winter. I get tired just fixing broken things for customers," he says.

Barton puts the polish on the big cars with as much fine attention as on the miniature. He didn't study mechanics at the College of Southern Idaho when he went to college there, but studied business management instead.

"After CSI, I spent a few months at the Gemmological Institute of America."

Barton says he never liked rough-and-tumble group sports. He preferred to read and research. He learned about cars by just taking them apart and putting them back together again — "just the way I learned to take watches apart and put them back together."

When he can't find parts to his big cars, he makes them. That's where his jewelry-making background comes in handy.

The Baron, as his mother calls him, is now getting ready to make a puzzle cube. It will be crafted from silver and contain 28 pieces, and won't measure more than one-inch square.

Barton has set up his personal guidelines for being a successful and good designer.

"The seven characteristics of a good designer are proportion, line, shape, mass, balance, rhythm and

TWIN FALLS — Performing tunes in country, soft rock and pop style, Idaho singer-songwriter Steve Eaton will perform this Wednesday, Feb. 16, at the Renaissance Academy of the Arts in Twin Falls.

From Pocatello, Eaton has performed several times in Twin Falls, says Rick Strickland, the director of the Renaissance Academy.

Over the years, Eaton's songs have been recorded by such performers as Art Garfunkle, Ann Murray and the Carpenters, Strickland says. Eaton's song, "Too Good to be Through," recorded by Dave Lemmon, currently is among the top 100 country songs.

The singer also has recorded albums on the RCA, Capitol and Mountain Bluebird record labels, Strickland says.

Eaton produced, engineered and performed on the recently released "Idaho Sampler," album, which is a collection of songs performed by other Idaho artists, such as the Braun Brothers, Swank and Strickland, Belinda Bowler and Kip Ataway.

Also a "very fine" guitar player, Eaton is building a reputation for writing advertising jingles and movie-scoring, Strickland says.

At the Wednesday concert, folk musicians Ernie Sites of Wendell and Rob Harding, a Jerome native, will be appearing with Eaton. Sites plays mandolin and is accompanied by Harding on guitar.

There will be shows at 7 and 9 p.m. Tickets are $4, with academy members and students admitted for $2.

Although tickets will be sold at the door, Strickland advises calling 734-0719 for reservations.

The academy, which also offers drama, music and dance instruction, is located at 502 Second Ave. E.

The academy is a place where Idaho artists can come and "do their musical thing," Strickland says.

CSI to screen films tonight

TWIN FALLS — The Herrett Museum at the College of Southern Idaho will present two films, "In the Land of the War Canoes" and "The Image Maker and the Indians," at 7 p.m. tonight in Room 108 of the Vo-Tech Building.

The films come on the closing day of the Edward S. Curtis exhibit, "Edward S. Curtis and the North American Indian," at the museum.

During his research, Curtis did make one movie. The year was 1914, and the setting was the Kwakiutl villages of Vancouver Island. It was shown in the theaters of Seattle and New York under the original title, "In the Land of the Head Hunters."

The film lapsed into obscurity until 1967, when Bill Holm and George I. Quimby of the Burke Museum at University of Washington collaborated in researching and editing original footage of Curtis's film. In 1972, David L. Gerth was added as a consulting editor and sound recordist for the project. The result of this collaboration is a 47-minute film, using original footage, but released under a new title, "In the Land of the War Canoes."

"The Image Maker and the Indians" is an audio-visual history of Curtis as a cinematographer.

There will be no admission charge for the films.

Magic Valley Symphony offers child's story

By WILLETTA WARBERG
Times-News arts critic

TWIN FALLS — For almost 50 years, a symphonic fairy tale, written by the Russian composer Sergei Prokofiev, has been delighting children and their parents throughout the world.

This Saturday, in the auditorium of the Fine Arts Building at the College of Southern Idaho, we will have the privilege of hearing this musical production — Prokofiev's "Peter and the Wolf." The music will be played by the Magic Valley Symphony, and the fairy tale will be narrated by Tony Mannen.

The concert will start at 8 p.m.

Prokofiev wrote the story and composed the music for "Peter and the Wolf" when he was 46. To date, it is probably the most ambitious piece ever written for children. And because of Prokofiev's intense understanding of children's curiosity and sense of humor, he wrote his story around instruments of an orchestra, using them to portray people and animals in his tale.

This was his clever way to teach children the instruments of an orchestra. Prokofiev, because of this successful composition, has been labeled the Walt Disney of the classical music world.

Here are the characters of this ingenious story and their corresponding instruments: Peter is dancing violins; the bird is a chirping flute; the duck is a quacking oboe; the cat is a sneaky clarinet in a low register; the grumpy grandfather is the bassoon; the wolf is three blirting horns; and the shooting of the hunters are bangs and bumps on kettle and bass drums.

The story is:

Early one morning, Peter opened the gate and went out into the big green meadow.

On the branch of a birch tree sat a little bird — Peter's friend. When he saw Peter, he chirped at him gaily, "All's quiet here."

Soon a duck came waddling around. She was very happy to see that Peter had not closed the gate, and so decided to have a nice swim in the deep pond in the meadow.

As soon as the little bird saw the duck, he flew down and settled himself in the grass beside her. Shrugging his shoulders, he said, "What kind of a bird are you if you can't fly?" To which the duck replied, "What kind of a bird are you if you can't swim?" and dived into the pond.

They argued and argued, the duck swimming in the pond, the little bird hopping back and forth along the bank.

Suddenly, something caught Peter's eye. It was a cat crawling through the grass. The cat said to herself, "The bird is busy arguing. If I could only have him for my dinner!" Stealthily, she crept toward him on her velvet paws.

"Oh, look out!" cried Peter. Quickly, the bird flew up into the tree while the duck quacked angrily at the cat — from the middle of the pond. The cat crawled round and round the tree and thought, "Is it worth climbing up so high? By the time I get there, the bird will have flown away."

All at once Grandpapa came out. He was angry because Peter had gone to the meadow. "The meadow is a dangerous place," he cried. "What if a wolf should come out of the forest? What would you do then?"

Peter paid no attention to Grandpapa's words. Boys like Peter are not afraid of wolves. Grandpapa took Peter by the hand, led him home — locked the gate.

No sooner had Peter gone than a big gray wolf did come out of the forest. In a twinkling, the cat sprang up into the tree. The duck quacked, and in her great excitement, jumped out of the pond.

No matter how hard the duck tried to run, she couldn't escape the wolf. He was getting nearer and nearer. He was catching up with her. There, he got her — and swallowed her with a single gulp!

And now this is how things stood: The cat was sitting on one branch up in the tree, the bird was sitting on another — not too close to the cat — while the wolf walked round and round the tree, looking at them both with greedy eyes.

In the meantime, Peter, without the slightest fear, stood behind the closed

E.F. Hutton speaks to employee

NEW YORK (UPI) — A woman stockbroker who posed nude for Playboy Magazine was fired Thursday by E.F. Hutton.

Mrs. Marina E. Verola, 29, and mother of two children, said she was given an "ultimatum" by E.F. Hutton that she either "resign or be fired" because of continued publicity generated by her appearance in a six-page layout in the magazine.

Mrs. Verola said she felt the firing was "unwarranted" and "unjustified."

She said she would remain a broker and would continue publishing an investment newsletter.

Mrs. Verola had previously worked for Dean Witter Reynolds but was fired when she told them she planned to pose for Playboy. She did not tell E.F. Hutton about posing for Playboy until after the magazine appeared.

Officials at E.F. Hutton headquarters in New York were unavailable for comment.

gate, watching all that was going on. Presently, he ran into the house, the branches of the tree around which the wolf was pacing, stretched out over this high wall.

Grabbing hold of this branch, Peter climbed over into the tree. He said to the bird, "Fly down and circle around the wolf's head, but take care that he doesn't catch you!"

The bird almost touched the wolf's head with his wings, while the wolf snapped furiously at him from this side and that. How that bird did worry the wolf! And oh, how the wolf tried to catch him! But the bird was far too clever for him.

Meanwhile, Peter had made a lasso, and letting it down carefully, he caught the wolf by the tail and pulled with all his might. Feeling himself caught, the wolf began to jump wildly, trying to get loose. But Peter had tied the other end of the rope to the tree, and the wolf's jumping only made the rope tighter around his tail! Just then, who should come out of the woods but the hunters, who were following the wolf's trail, and shooting as they came.

From his perch in the tree Peter cried out to them, "You don't need to shoot. The bird and I have already caught him! Please help us take him to the zoo."

The hunters were only too willing. And now you can just imagine the triumphant procession! Peter at the head, after him the hunters, leading the wolf, and winding up the procession, Grandpapa and the cat.

Grandpapa shook his head reprovingly. "This is all very well, but what if Peter had not caught the wolf, what then!" Above them flew the little bird, merrily chirping, "Aren't we smart, Peter and I? See what we have caught!"

And if you had listened carefully, you could have heard the duck quacking away inside the wolf, because in his haste the wolf had swallowed her whole and the duck was still alive.

comfortable emphasis on a center of interest, such as a stone," he says.

"I feel jewelry should be as individualistic as a person's signature. Mass production has no place in jewelry. It produces poor quality with a lack of personal attention.

"Jewelry is one of the few remaining areas that mass production has not infiltrated to any great extent. We should try to keep it that way.

"I don't believe that a person can really enjoy a fine piece of jewelry if all of her friends are wearing the same thing. A Rolls Royce or a Packard are unique. Chevrolets and Fords are not. We all are individuals, and our jewelry and cars can be an extension of our personality."

Barton has been asked to teach jewelry-making at CSI and he probably will do so, which will test yet another of Barton's artistic facets.

Columnist Reeves retraces journey of de Tocqueville

By KENNETH R. CLARK
UPI TV Reporter

NEW YORK (UPI) — In 1831, a French aristocrat named Alexis de Tocqueville toured a fledgling United States, then went home with mixed emotions to write his now classic "Democracy in America."

A century and a half later, political columnist Richard Reeves duplicated the trip, asked essentially the same questions of the same sort of people and found the passage of time has changed things very little.

"He thought we were greedy and hustling and it really bothered him," said Reeves. "You have to remember, he was a French aristocrat and very rich. We were trying to get rich, so he saw us in one way and we saw ourselves in a much different way.

"I conclude democracy works very well. It just doesn't do what he thought it should do."

Reeves, who added Alaska and California to the original tour of the Atlantic seaboard, went Tocqueville one better. He not only wrote "American Journey" as a result of following in the Frenchman's footsteps, he turned it into a television special which will air March 30 on PBS stations, nationwide.

Reeves said he became hooked on Tocqueville while working as a columnist at The New York Times.

"When I was with The Times, they wanted you to give depth to a story and we figured out that meant, 'Quote Tocqueville.'" he said with a chuckle. "The editors loved it. Guys at the Times would have well-indexed copies of 'Democracy in America' around so I really read it because I was exposed to it so often."

Reeves became a serious scholar of the subject, however, when he learned that Tocqueville's original notes — translated into English — were on file at Yale University.

"When I saw them they were all Q and A (questions and answers)," said Reeves. "They detailed where he was on a certain day, who he had talked to and the conversations. I determined then, in the late '60s, that I would take his notebooks and try to do it again."

Television

The result was an 18,000-mile odyssey in search of those things which remain, as they were 150 years ago, "uniquely American."

To find them, Reeves followed his French predecessor as closely as possible.

Tocqueville talked with Davy Crockett, so Reeves interviewed Tennessee sheriff Fate Thomas. Tocqueville spoke with an Indian guide in the wilderness of Saginaw, Mich., so Reeves sought out an Indian guide in the wilderness of Alaska.

Tocqueville was annoyed by the "boastful patriotism" of Americans, and Reeves found it still strident, still proud. Piece by piece, "American Journey" evolved.

Reeves got PBS station WPBT in South Florida interested in producing the documentary, and WPBT had no trouble finding an underwriter. Cooper Industries, founded in Ohio in the very year of Tocqueville's journey, signed on in celebration of its 150th birthday.

As nomadic Americans are inclined to do, Cooper Industries since has moved west, to Houston. "American Journey" seemed a natural — especially since Reeves said we have not, as a people, changed our wandering ways.

"Again and again we emphasize in the film that we're a nation of leavers," he said. "The people who came here abandoned their families in Europe. If a son went out to the new frontier with his new bride, he usually never saw his parents again.

"The psychological leavings of divorce and separation are well within the American character. We're a nomad people. Tocqueville said we would go to the Pacific Ocean then turn around and destroy everything behind us."

Reeves said another facet of the American character that has not changed since Tocqueville commented upon it is a basic unwillingness to punish crime — ironically because native compassion drove up the cost.

"In the country he came from, they just used yards or camps," he said. "They just threw people in regardless of how many there were.

"We were determined to build prisons that somehow reflected human dignity or individualism. We invented the individual cell ... that sense of giving the meanest and lowest some sort of justice and some sort of hope in the system.

"It's a real problem that will be with us for a long time. I think our biggest danger is we will overreact to it."

And what would ar overreaction be?

"Concentration camps, which we would call work training camps or something like that," Reeves said. "You could go out and get some support for that."

'New' Mark Twain book in print

By PAMELA MacLEAN
United Press International

SAN FRANCISCO — A strange fantasy novel by Mark Twain, a bitter satire set in "Medieval Austria," has been published for the first time by the University of California Press in Twain's final version.

"No. 44, The Mysterious Stranger," published 73 years after the author's death, is based on the long-forgotten final draft of the book. The final draft, the third, was ignored by Twain's official biographer Albert Bigelow Paine when the book was originally brought out in 1916.

Paine so severely "doctored" the first draft of the manuscript, to spare turn-of-the-century readers Twain's bitter satire about the hypocrisy and corruption of the 19th century, that the point of the story was lost, editors at UC Press said.

Paine cut a quarter of Twain's words from "Mysterious Stranger," including his allusions to western imperialism in the Boer and Spanish-American wars.

In 1963 a university professor discovered Paine's posthumous edition was a "fraud," and undertook to bring out a complete text based on Twain's 12 years of work on "Mysterious Stranger," using the final draft.

Books

The new book is filled with fantasy, magic and psychic adventure in a Gothic style. It was Twain's last work, written in his late sixties and early seventies.

Twain leads the reader through unexplored possibilities of the mind, traveling through time and space to experience adventure.

The story opens at the dawn of the age of printing, taking place in a printshop hidden in an abandoned castle.

A young apprentice, August Feldner, narrates the story of his acquaintance with No. 44, a strange young man who proves to be not quite human.

No. 44, young Feldner soon learns, is capable of mind reading, talking with animals, instantaneous travel to all parts of the world and into the future.

The book comes from Twain's original manuscripts, part of the Mark Twain Project in the Bancroft Library at Berkeley.

The Mark Twain Project contains 45 of his surviving notebooks, 3,000 original letters and more than 10,000 letters written to Twain. And to whet the appetite of any great lover of Twain's writing, nearly 700 previously unpublished literary manuscripts make up the largest collection of Mark Twain manuscripts anywhere.

Brief reviews

From Times-News wire services

AIRPLANE II: THE SEQUEL: A pretty funny sequel to a very funny comedy, this time telling the story of the rescue of a an aircraft flying to the movie. The opening 10 minutes are a flat-out scream, but then it's hits and misses all the way to a weak conclusion. PG. 3½ stars.

HALLOWEEN III: THE SEASON OF THE WITCH: A surprsingly juicy thriller about a legendary practical joker who steals one of the stones from Stonhenge and uses it to manufacture Halloween masks that can kill all of the children who wear them. That's more than a little sick, but there is plenty of joy in the filmmaking. This film qualifies for status as one of those good films you're embarrassed to admit you liked. R. 3 stars.

MY FAVORITE YEAR: Peter O'Toole gives a grand performance as a drunken old movie star akin to Errol Flynn in the story of a young TV. comedy writer in the '50s trying to keep O'Toole sober for a guest shot on a live TV show. A marvelous celebration of stardom, youthful enthusiasm and the high energy of live TV. PG. 4 stars.

THE SEDUCTION: Let's be blunt. Would you pay $4 to see Morgan Fairchild naked? There's no other reason to invest in this laughably implausible thriller about a TV anchorwoman who is being chased by a qsychotic fan. Well, would you pay $5? Rated PG. 1 star.

TOOTSIE: More than the year's funniest film, "Tootsie" also is a celebration of the actor's life and a sly comment on sexual role-playing with Dustin Hoffman in a brilliant double role as an actor so desperate for work he takes a job as actress without anyone on the soap opera knowing he's a man. Of all of the holiday pictures, this is the one to see first. PG. 4 stars.

THE VERDICT: Paul Newman stars as a down-and-out lawyer who gets one last chance to redeem himself in arguing on behalf of the victim of medical malpractice. As good as Newman is in the role, the film really works because of David Mamet's cynical script and tough supporting performances by James Mason and Jack Warden as attorneys. A fine courtroom drama. R. 3½ stars.

What's what

Q. Did your Love and War man say the typical bridegroom does not marry the girl next door?

A. That's right. But he does marry some girl who lives within 20 blocks of his home. It's also known that the typical bride was acquainted with her husband for two years before the wedding. And the average bride now is age 21. So an unmarried 19-year-old woman can calculate she's already met her husband-to-be, and he's somebody who lives fairly near.

Q. What's the difference between French ice cream and regular ice cream?

A. The French ice cream contains egg yolks, regular doesn't.

CHILEAN CHICKENS

But she's invisible

New show features a naked woman

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD — Viewers can spend a couple of hours Feb. 13 with a stark naked lady in prime time television but, worse luck, she will only be heard, not seen.

The undraped female is Alexa Hamilton who stars in "Portrait of an Invisible Woman," an NBC-TV movie in which the brunette beauty spends about half her time starkers. Or at least we THINK she is in the buff.

Actually, it's a trick. Alexa is modestly clad at all times, trussed in an iridescent blue body stocking with matching mittens and hood that covers her head entirely.

It is this brilliant blue, blending invisibly with the walls, floor and ceiling of a room covered in the same material that gives the invisible effect.

It is called chroma key, time consuming, laborious and high tech. For Alexa it was exhausting and, on a couple of occasions, dangerous.

The results are convincing, the best special effects involving invisibility ever attempted on screen. It surpasses the movie and TV versions of "The Invisible Man" by several light years.

Chroma key sophistication provides much more than simple indentations on a carpet to give the impression of an invisible person treading across a room or the outline of a body on a bed.

In the role of Sandy Martinson, Alexa is covered with a chemical substance that leaves her wholely and presumably forever invisible. Her face can be seen only by the application of makeup topped by a wig.

Her clothes, of course, are altogether visible. To achieve total invisibility, therefore, she must strip nude, which she does in several scenes.

It is curiously erotic watching a woman's clothes disapper until one sees only a disembodied brassiere and panties floating around, leaving viewers to imagine who or what is in them.

When the lingerie is stripped away imaginations are allowed to run rampant, especially in an elevator crowded with men and in a men's steam room.

We are given a forbidden outline of the naked lady in the steam room when the thick air provides a silhouette.

What we don't know is that Alexa shot every scene alone in the iridescent blue room while her fellow actors performed simultaneously on another set fully visible to the camera.

"It got lonely sometimes," Alexa said. "With that hood on I couldn't see. So they put sand bags on the floor out of camera range to stop me from walking out of the scene. I bruised myself a lot walking into walls.

"In one shot I had to fall into a mud puddle in the body stocking and hood. The mud congealed on the hood and I couldn't breathe. I had to rip the hood off before I passed out."

The aspect of the movie that Alexa found fascinating was speculation by cast and crew — and herself — about what a person would do if, indeed, he or she could become invisible.

She said sex and economics were the first things to come to minds — the unseen voyeur and taking advantage of financial opportunities.

"There's some voyeur in all of us," she said.

"I suppose everyone has speculated about what they would do, where they would go and what they'd want to see if they were invisible. I think it depends on what stage of your life you'd find yourself. It would change all the time.

"If I were invisible I'd be less inhibited than the woman I play in the movie. I'd have more fun with it.

"But we had to be careful with visual effects to avoid double entendres and too obvious situations involving a naked lady because the show will air at 8 o'clock, looking for the family audience.

"Even so, there is something erotic about knowing there is an undressed woman in a scene, even if you can't see her.

"Our special effects give you the feeling she is right there on screen. It's heightened by little touches. When I sit down on a cold leather seat I react with a little sound of shock.

"If we get good ratings, we are supposed to become a weekly series. But I don't know. We're on opposite 'The Winds of War.'"

Horse is a link to the unseen world

By Jenne R. Andrews
Special to The Times-News

A short time ago some of us sitting in the Silver Grill Cafe in Fort Collins, Colo., for an early breakfast. We had a failure of appetites as we began to page through the Denver morning papers.

There, on the front page, was an atrocity. The caption of a grey, remote photograph told us that we were looking at horses from Queen Elizabeth's "Household Cavalry," lying in the street dead or dying. The atrocity here was the loss of human life, of course: the deaths of eight soldiers, musicians and pensioners, all victims of IRA bombs.

I, sadly, am an inveterate news reader. Like most of my contemporaries I have adapted to its perpetual vicissitudes. I am used to, if that is the right phrase, the anger and helplessness that passes through me when I read of anyone in pain. And, as I looked at other pictures related to the incident, I thought I could see in the faces of the people who had witnessed or survived the bombings a resignation. I saw the kind of anger and intention to keep on that means survival, the acceptance that lives had been spared as a kind of grace. I thought I could see prayer.

But I knew that if I could see the eyes of the horses more clearly, I would be undone by naked bewilderment, vulnerability and agony. And this realization woke an only recently-soothed ache within me related to an experience of my own.

I am one of those people sentimental and optimistic enough to have owned a horse, to have loved horses, to have written about them effusively.

Long ago, I sat in my room in an adobe house in Albuquerque waiting for the end of a rainstorm, and picked up my first Margaret Henry book about horses: "King of the Wind." My copy of this book vanished in some garage sale, but I still remember it.

The first, delicate Arabian of all time, as the story goes, was not only lovely to behold but was beautiful in that he epitomized freedom. He was the king of the wind and his only companion was a small boy who understood him and whom he understood.

Henry describes in a delicate, humorous way how Arabians "happebed." This lovely animal swept a white, tall filly off her feet while a group of British noblemen were preoccupied with something else. Their sententious, sluggish, much bigger stallion was, of all faux pas, dozing. The foal produced by this mating was, naturally, a wonderful melding of the best of his sire and dam.

From the time I finished my hundredth reading of "King of the Wind," I was starry-eyed over Arabians. I loved the swan-like curve of the Arabian's neck and the great, doe-like eyes. Perhaps most of all I liked that look of galvanic velvet an Arabian has when he is alert.

I knew that Arabs were "smart," that they startled as easily as wild birds, and that they had a capacity to love their owners and showed a great "heart to perform."

When my father died in 1978, I moved home to Fort Collins after eight years writing and teaching in Minnesota. I bought a small, typically lively 7/8 Arabian mare from a family who had named her "Flicka" (what else?). But somewhat embarrassed over my preoccupation with horses at 30, I changed her name to "Epiphany" (to paraphrase the dictionary, "a miraculous appearance, a manifestation of something beautiful, magical").

This was a summer that would have been much sadder and longer without horses, no matter how pretentious their names. I rode at the end of a hard day doing what I had never known how to do — the settling of matters arising from a death.

I could "cue" Epiphany into a canter and get a taste of freedom, a great gulp of beauty, heading over a rise into a full view of the mountains and the wheeling sky. My dog raced low in the grass, hunting for birds. These hours of quiet companionability with animals were my meditation.

On the Fourth of July that summer, Epiphany made me understand that she wanted nothing to do with my friend's dark stallion by whipping away from his corral toward me at full tilt. When I hit the ground in a life-saving reflex, she sailed over my head and headed up the highway with stirrups flapping. She went home to the corral where a pinto pony named Cindy, more "nanny" than horse, welcomed her as gladly as ever a grandmother welcomes her momentarily prodigal granddaughter.

Shortly after this incident, I went out to visit Marie in Wellington, Colo., who, I had heard, had "beautiful stallions." I was captivated by Marie, a great infection of hospitable talk and by the Mountain View Arabian farm which is not a posh multi-million dollar stable flanked by bluegrass, but a sedately tender clump of barns, house and corrals under great trees with a fine view of the sweep of the foothills and the blue upheaval of the mountains.

Her Arabians are big and somehow still delicate — grey-blue, grey-white or roan and indelibly beautiful. They gathered around me like a dynasty of swans, tucking their necks and widening their eyes, to sniff my hands. Peremptorily, Marie walked to a stall, opened it, and said, "Sakrcharm, get out here!" And, out stepped a vision: a mahogany-chestnut stallion with a flaxen mane and tail, a swaggerer, a Nureyev of horses. The mares withdrew in deference into the barn's shade, and Marie took Sakr out into the sun to "longe" him so that I could see his "action" and his "definition."

Breeding week came along in late July after Dr. Bob had given my recalcitrant mare an injection of estrogen. Marie came and trailered her out to the farm, and I drove out. Sakrcharm was somewhat unsure of himself and Ephiphany was a bit coy, but our sound planning did not fail us, for four months later, when I was visiting in Minnesota, a note came from Dr. Bob reading, "She is pregant to our last breeding date, 24 August." Epiphany foaled a beautiful colt, "Ole' Caliente," on July 24, 1979.

After Caliente had been trained, I sold him to a friend. One morning several months ago I learned that he had broken his leg in a training accident and had to be put down. Everyone who had ridden or played with him or fed him was immensely sad. I was given the news in the Silver Grill by someone who didn't know that I didn't know, went out to my car and had a long cry, partly, I think because something of the utmost importance to me was, even before this death, becoming a part of an old life.

It had been an unconscious truth for me for some time that along with other day dreams, perhaps, the actual possession of a horse is a thirst, a hunger that for many of us, belongs to the past.

I reviewed the poems I had written recently, somewhat disturbed over them because they bring this lovely colt to life as literature does, and keeps him alive in my imagination. But with time, my material "horselessness" has proven to have its rewards. Today I am very much aware of the fact that I was blessed with proximity to a particular kind of beauty.

This morning an engaging, elderly man came to me with a manuscript fat with stories of wrangling days in Wyoming. He wanted them typed and polished. We talked about the style of a good "cowboy story," and he said, "I want to keep some of the parlance."

This illuminated things for me, and I suddenly remembered times at the mill, talking in a parlance with the quiet, strong Western men who raise grain from very dry ground, men who love horses with a measure of the same tolerant affection with which one loves a family.

Horses become part of our mythology, take root in our hearts and simply can't be forgotten, whether one loses them or sells them, outgrows them or can't ride anymore. They emblemize our West. They nourish the heart and the eye.

I tacked up on my bulletin board two snapshots of Caliente, each showing him looking off with intense interest toward something only he could see. I looked down at my own hands which, among the things, have experienced coming to terms with a life, have known the pleasure of touching a horse.

Perhaps to touch a horse means to touch a heartbeat of the unseen, to be connected to the land; to align the often discomfitting fact of being human with the existence of other things.

Jenne R. Andrews is a Ft. Collins, Colo. teacher, poet and lover of horses.

Playboy takes notice

BILLERICA, Mass. (UPI) — Although Loretta Martin wasn't allowed to tell her high school classmates in their yearbook of her wish to pose nude for Playboy, the yearbook censorship flap got the attention of the magazine's editors.

Playboy spokesman Dan Sheridan said Wednesday he would present a picture of the 17-year-old Billerica High School senior for consideration of the photo editors, thanks to the publicity surrounding her deleted yearbook entry.

But, Sheridan cautioned, Playboy gets "hundreds and hundreds and hundreds of pictures every day, and only 12 people are chosen every year to pose for a centerfold picture."

Ms. Martin had submitted the Playboy fantasy to go with her yearbook picture. School officials said it was inappropriate, and rejected it — along with 109 other such submissions from the 550-member senior class.

Technology puts friends together in album

By STEVE MORSE
The Boston Globe

Music

The talk of Nashville these days is a double album featuring four of the biggest names in country music — Willie Nelson, Kris Kristofferson, Brenda Lee and Dolly Parton. Titled "The Winning Hand," it has been two years in the making and represents a touching triumph of art and friendship over business.

"It really is a record that probably could never happen again," Brenda Lee said in a recent phone interview from Nashville. "I think we all did it out of love."

Consisting of peak solo and duet performances by the above stars, with liner notes by Johnny Cash, the album has just been released but has already shot high on the Billboard country charts.

What really has Nashville buzzing, though, is the way "The Winning Hand" was made.

The album has an extremely intimate and raw, unsweetened country sound, yet the singers were never in the studio together. Produced by Fred Foster, the LP was actually assembled from a hodgepodge of separate recording sessions that were banged into shape by the wonders of modern studio technology. For once, such technology helped, and did not blur, country's charm.

"I don't think it took away from the record just because we weren't together," Lee said. "You couldn't really tell we weren't together because of the great engineering done on it.

"I was really happy when I heard what Fred had done to it," Lee added. "I felt I was sitting in the living room with these people and they were passing the guitar around and singing. It wasn't so mechanical or slick. It kept that personal touch, which is lacking in some records today."

The story behind "The Winning Hand" is grist for a fantasy novel.

First, there is Fred Foster's mulish determination never to give up in the face of corporate and legal obstacles. And then there's the comic relief of Foster having to track Willie Nelson down to a golf course near Austin, Tex., and waiting for him to play golf and finish a Cajun dinner before he'd step into the studio. Yet the hassle was worth it, because Nelson ended up sounding more country than he has in years, especially compared to his more pop-flavored work of late.

The album's history began when producer Foster, 51, who had recorded Nelson and Parton on Monument Records in the '60s, ran into Nelson at a dinner a couple of years ago. Nelson asked him what had happened to some of the extra '60s tracks he'd recorded but had never released.

Dolly, Willie and Kris join Brenda Lee in a unique effort

"I want them out. I'm proud of them," Nelson told him.

Foster, interviewed recently, said that after Nelson's "Red-Headed Stranger" album on CBS had become a smash hit in 1975 — starting a Nelson streak that hasn't slowed since — many of Nelson's earlier record labels started releasing his old tracks to exploit his popularity.

"But I didn't want to do that," Foster said. "I would want to consult with the artist and not put out anything less than what they were doing at the time."

After meeting Willie at the dinner, Foster conceived the idea of taking five of the best songs from Nelson's earlier Monument tenure, matching them with five songs from some 1978 Brenda Lee sessions to which he also owned the rights, then having Willie and Brenda come in to finish it off with some duets.

Because Foster's Monument label also hadn't had a record out in a few years, Foster figured it would be a nice way to return.

"What hapened then was that Willie came into town and we spent the afternoon playing all the old tapes. He kept walking around the office, listening to the old tapes and saying, 'There's an event here, but I don't know what it is.' Then he said, 'Hey, why not get Kris and Dolly in here and make it a double album?'"

Since they were old friends, it was natural for Nelson to want to add them to the project. But it created more legal headaches for Foster, who already needed permission from CBS to use Nelson and clearance from MCA to record Brenda Lee.

"What about all the managers and lawyers I'll have to deal with?" Foster sheepishly protested.

"I'll help you," Nelson said.

Thus began an exhausting trek through red tape and of finding compatible studio time. "I had to go all over the country tracking people down," he recalled. "I had to go to Colorado, Los Angeles, Austin and back to Nashville. I had to catch as catch can. I've opened tape boxes in so many airport security stations that I'd finally just leave the box open when I went through the security check and keep a piece of tape in my pocket to tape it up after I got through."

But the aggravation paid off. "I managed to get all new duets except for Dolly, who couldn't get permission from RCA to do it. We had clearance for a moment, but then it disappeared again. So the stuff she does on the album is from the sessions she did in the '60s, although the band tracks are new."

Foster sounds apologetic, but there's no need to, since Dolly's singing is among the strongest on the album. Unlike her overglamorized Hollywood image of today, she had a more compelling grit in the '60s. Singing in a Tennessee country twang, she romps through the humorous "Ping Pong" (comparing love to a Ping Pong game, with an overdub from Kristofferson); the poignant "Little Things" (a love song that was left solo); and the dance hall raveup. "What Do You Think About Lovin,'" in which she's rousingly joined by Brenda Lee.

The most memorable story behind the album, though, was how Nelson re-recorded his '60s tracks in a studio he build into a golf course complex he owns near Austin.

"Willie said to bring your golf clubs down," said Foster. "So I got down there and there he was in a golf cart saying, 'Let's hit em.' So we played, but later when I asked him to record he said, 'No, not tonight because we have a chef coming in from New Orleans to cook a Cajun dinner.' So the next day came and we got up at 7 a.m. to play golf again. By 10 o'clock there was a huge storm on the horizon and when it hit, Willie finally said, 'OK, let's record.' We barely made it off the course in time, and the storm rained nine inches. But once we got into his studio he was incredible. He did all his parts in about three hours.

Randy Newman unleashes his acid wit

By GEORGE KANZLER
Newhouse News Service

NEW YORK — Randy Newman is one of the most caustic observers of human nature since Ambrose Beirce. In his songs, Newman is a master of irony — often impersonating a reprehensible character, such as a bigot.

He had a big hit with a song ridiculing "Short People," and it was presented with such tongue-in-cheek relish that it got him into a lot of trouble with short people rather than with the bigots he was satirizing.

Newman gets into trouble like that because the characters he creates are more than cliches. It's sometimes hard to tell whether he is actually empathetic with the louts who constitute his singing persona.

He does this best on "There's a Party at My House," a jaunty rock 'n' roll song with an infectious beginning and chorus full of such happy cliches as, "We're gonna have some fun; we're gonna rock the night away." But as the song progresses, the singer begins to reveal his sadomasochistic intentions, describing what will befall "that little blonde-haired girl" when he sings, "Hey Bobby, get the rope."

Yep, Randy Newman's roped you in again. "There's a Party ..." is one of a dozen songs on "Trouble in Paradise" (Warner Bros. Records), Newman's latest fusillade aimed at the soured American Dream.

The album includes songs about three cities — Los Angeles, Miami and Cape Town, South Africa ... all of which could qualify as troubled paradises.

"I Love L.A." raucously celebrates everything that most people find boorish about that city.

On "Christmas in Capetown," an American is uneasy about being white in apartheid South Africa at Christmas. But by using American epithets for blacks instead of the less chilling — to our ears — Afrikaans "kaffir," Newman brings home the casual bigotry of the white man.

"Miami" is another celebration gone slightly askew, for the singer's Miami is not the destination of tourists, but a decadent city of dope, sex and sin.

Newman's most fully realized lout appears on "My Life is Good," which is also his most ambitious production. This character — presented, jarringly, as Newman himself — brags about his Mexican house-slave, berates his son's teacher and boasts about how he'll take sexual liberties with a young associate's wife.

The album also contains a duet with Paul Simon, "The Blues," that pokes gentle fun at Simon's melancholy ballads; and the most jaundiced dirge ever penned to the Vietnam dead.

Bea Arthur back, it's a mistake

By The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — Bea (Maude) Arthur is back and she should have stayed away.

After four years of series shopping, Arthur has decided on "Amanda's" (Thursday nights on ABC), a broken-down sitcom about a broken-down hotel.

Again playing a tart-tongued browbeater, Arthur presides over what ABC describes as "a charming, but precariously unstable, small hotel with prim rooms overlooking the Pacific Ocean."

Only boobs need apply as staff. One of the underlings is Aldo, a Latin gofer played by Saturday Night Live alumnus Tony Rosato. This is a supremely embarrassing come-down for Tony, who gets to say classic lines such as, "The oven, she dead." He also gets hit over the head with a loaf of French bread.

In the role of Amanda Cartwright, Arthur insults everything but the kitchen sink, which she'll probably get around to. She describes her daughter-in-law as a "waste of space."

Besides that, her blouse "sucks eggs."

When a customer complains that the lettuce in her salad is wilted, Amanda replies, "You probably scared it to death."

Throughout, there are lots of slamming doors and supposed sight gags. The whole deal is a big, unfunny bore.

MASH REHASH: Channel 5 in Dallas-Fort Worth has a novel idea for the night of CBS's two-and-a-half hour windup of "MASH."

The station will preempt NBC's "Tonight Show" on Feb. 28, and insert the very first episode of MASH, followed by the show in which Col. Henry Blake (McLean Stevenson) leaves the 4077th Mobile Army Surgical Hospital.

Happy Birthday!
